TWENTY POUNDS REWARD.

Through great negligence, two MEDALS, one Gold the other Silver, have been LOST (no doubt STOLEN) from the Office of the Secretary of the late Exhibition. They had been awarded my late Father from a Society in England for samples of wine exhibited in the years 1823 and 1828, the said wine being made at his Estate, Brush Farm, near Parramatta. A simple advertisement offering a nameless reward for their recovery appears to be all the interest taken by the Secretary aforesaid in the matter. No pecuniary value can compensate me for their loss. I, therefore, offer a reward of £20 for their recovery and conviction of the thief.

NEW SOUTH WALES PARLIAMENT.

LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL

TUESDAY, JUNE 22.

The PRESIDENT took the chair at half-past 4 o'clock.

MESSAGES FROM THE GOVERNOR.

The PRESIDENT read messages from the Governor, according the Royal assent to the Forfeited Purchases Declaratory Bill, and the Small Debts Act Amendment Bill.

PETITION.

Mr. DARLEY presented a petition from certain merchants and importers of Sydney, praying the Council to insist on its amendments in the Secret Bills of Sale Amendment Bill.

The petition was received.

ADJOURNMENT.

Mr. OGILVIE rose to move the adjournment of the House. He was induced to take this step, he proceeded to say, as he found himself placed in a peculiar and grave position. Having been accused by an hon. member of that House of conduct——

The PRESIDENT: The hon. member cannot refer to a previous debate.

Mr. OGILVIE resumed his seat and did not proceed further with his explanation.

EXECUTIVE COUNCILLORS (FUNCTIONS SUBSTITUTION) BILL.

Sir JOHN ROBERTSON moved the second reading of this bill. The bill, he explained, had been introduced with a view of facilitating the business of the Government, and he was sure hon. members would at once see the desirability of passing the measure.

The bill was read the second time, and the House resolved itself into committee to consider the bill in detail.

Clause 1—"Short title and interpretation."

The clause was agreed to.

Clause 2, "It shall be lawful for the Governor, with the advice of the Executive Council, to authorise any member of the said Council to exercise the powers and perform the official duties and be responsible for the obligations appertaining or annexed to any other member of the said Council in respect to the administration of any department of the public service, whether such powers, duties, or obligations shall have been or be created by virtue of the terms (express or implied) of any Act of Parliament, or shall have been or be sanctioned by official or other custom. Provided that no such authority shall be granted under this Act in respect of the powers, duties, and obligations now or hereafter to be by law annexed or incident to the office of her Majesty's Attorney-General."

Mr. C. CAMPBELL suggested that Solicitor-General might be substituted for Attorney-General.

Sir JOHN ROBERTSON pointed out that it would be absurd to adopt this suggestion, seeing that we had no Solicitor-General. The main reason why the Attorney-General should not come under the operation of this clause was because the Attorney-General was the grand jury of the country.

Sir ALFRED STEPHEN believed that there had been a distinct resolution made by that House that the office of Solicitor-General should be revived. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. C. CAMPBELL trusted that the Vice-President of the Executive Council would use his influence towards reviving the office of Solicitor-General.

Mr. FOSTER thought it was a pity we had no Solicitor-General, but he believed the reason of that was mainly because the Government had found it a difficult matter to obtain a competent gentleman who would throw up his private practice for the salary which was attached to the office of Solicitor-General. And if the office was not filled by a competent gentleman, he thought we were much better without it.

Mr. GORDON said that as there was a deficit in the revenue of the country there was no necessity for maintaining the offices of Minister of Justice and Minister of Education separate. Previous to the passing of the Public Instruction Act the offices were combined. He thought the office of Minister of Justice which was not filled by a lawyer, might be abolished.

Mr. DOCKER pointed out that the office of Solicitor-General had not been abolished, which would have to be done by an alteration in the Constitution Act. The office was merely in abeyance, and there was nothing to prevent the Government of the day from appointing a Solicitor-General to-morrow. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. ALEXANDER CAMPBELL thought that it would be better for the interests of the country that a Solicitor-General should be appointed.

The clause was then agreed to.

Clause 3, "Record of authorities granted under this Act," and clause 4, "Signatures by one member of the Executive Council in the absence of another," were also agreed to.

In Clause 5, "Validation of certain Ministerial Acts," several verbal amendments were made on the motion of Sir Alfred Stephen in order to simplify the language of the clause. The clause was then agreed to in the following amended form:—"All acts whatsoever connected with the administration of any department of the public service or Act of the Legislature done or commenced before the passing of this Act by any Member of the Executive Council having assumed to act in the place of any other member of the said Council shall be as valid and effectual to all intents and purposes as if the same had been done or commenced by such last mentioned member."

The preamble was then passed, the bill reported with amendments, and the report agreed to.

MESSAGE.

Messages were received from the Legislative Assembly, intimating that the Assembly had passed the Volunteer Land Orders Bill, the Temporary Supreme Court Judge Bill, and the Bill to Protect Live Stock from certain Noxious Animals.

On the motion of Sir JOHN ROBERTSON, each of the above-mentioned bills were read a first time.

STAMP DUTIES BILL.

On the receipt of a message from the Legislative Assembly asking the concurrence of the Council in the passage of the Stamp Duties Bill,

Mr. SAMUEL moved that the bill be read a first time.

The motion was agreed to, and the bill was read a first time.

Mr. SAMUEL then moved that the standing orders be suspended, in order that the bill might pass through all its stages that evening.

Mr. JOHN CAMPBELL objected, and

The second reading was then made an order of the day for the following day.

LAND FOR PUBLIC PURPOSES ACQUISITION BILL.

On the motion of Mr. SAMUEL, this bill was re-committed for the purpose of re-considering certain clauses.

In clause 17, "Compensation, how to be estimated,"

Mr. SAMUEL proposed to have an amendment made The clause read as follows: "In estimating or assessing the compensation to be paid under this Act, regard shall be had by the valuators and by the jury (on any issue), not only to the value of the land taken by the Minister and to the provisions of the tenth section of this Act where the same shall be applicable, but also to the damage (if any) to be sustained by the owner of the lands by reason of the severing of the lands taken from the other lands of such owner, or other injuries suffered by such other lands by reason of the exercise of the powers expressed or incorporated in this Act, and they shall assess the same according to what they shall find to have been the value of such lands, estate, or interest at the time of the resumption thereof, or the extent of the damage or injury sustained." He proposed to amend the clause by inserting, after the word "also" the following words—"to the loss which the claimant may sustain by reason of the time intervening between the time of such taking, and the day of payment aforesaid."

Mr. DARLEY was afraid that the amendment would not meet the case. The arbitrators could not anticipate the time that might elapse between the giving of the verdict, and the time of payment of the money.

Mr. SAMUEL said that he believed that, as a matter of law, the amount of a verdict always bore interest until it was paid by the Government. [Sir ALFRED STEPHEN: Hear, hear.] He thought that fully met the objection raised by Mr. Darley. If hon. members would pass the clause as he proposed to amend it, he would promise to ask his hon. colleagues in the other House to have such an amendment passed as would meet the wishes of members of this House.

The amendment was eventually withdrawn.

The clause was amended by the omission of the proviso. The effect of the amendment was to leave the clause in the same position as when it came up from the Assembly.

The clause as amended stood part of the bill.

Mr. SAMUEL proposed the insertion of the following new clause, in lieu of clause 10:—"A District Court shall, notwithstanding anything contained in the District Courts Act of 1858, have jurisdiction to try any such action of compensation at the District Court holden within the district wherein any land resumed under this Act (or the greater portion of such land) is situated, in any case where the whole amount of the claim in respect to such land served in pursuance of the 12th section of this Act does not exceed £200; or, if exceeding that amount, in any case where the Minister and the claimant, by a memorandum signed by them, or by such claimant's attorney and the Crown solicitor, agree thereto. For the purposes of this section the provisions of the said District Courts Act and of any Act amending the same, together with all rights made or to be made thereunder, shall be deemed to apply to all proceedings taken in any District Court hereunder."

The clause as read was agreed to.

The preamble having been agreed to, the bill was reported with further amendments.

Mr. SAMUEL moved the recommittal of the bill.

The clause having reference to the payment of compensation was struck out; and clause 17 was amended, on the motion of Sir ALFRED STEPHEN, in such a manner as to read as follows:—"In estimating or assessing the compensation to be paid under this act regard shall be had by the valuators and by the jury (on any issue) not only to the value of the land taken by the Minister, and to the provisions of the tenth section of this Act, where the same shall be applicable, but also to the damage (if any) to be sustained by the claimant by reason of the severing of the lands taken from the other lands, or other injuries suffered by him by reason of the exercise of the powers expressed or incorporated in this Act; and they shall assess the same according to what they shall find to have been the value of such lands, estate, or interest at the time of the resumption thereof, or to the extent of the damage or injury sustained."

The bill was reported with further amendments.

Mr. SAMUEL moved the adoption of the report.

Mr. JOHN CAMPBELL opposed the adoption of the report. He considered this bill was a most tyrannical piece of legislation, and tended to consolidate everything in the hands of the Government. He objected to the general power of entry into private lands being given to the Government, as this bill gave.

The report was adopted, and the third reading of the bill stood an order of the day for the following day.

CHURCH AND SCHOOL LANDS DEDICATION BILL (No. 2).

On the motion of Sir JOHN ROBERTSON, this bill was read the second time; and the House resolved itself into committee for the consideration of the bill in detail.

The preamble having been postponed,

Clauses 1 to 4, inclusive, were agreed to without discussion.

Clause 5. "During the interval between the date of the passing of this Act and the thirty-first day of December in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty-two the whole of the annual income derived from the land described in the said schedule (whether from leases or by way of rent or from investments or otherwise howsoever), together with the annual income derived from any investments of the proceeds of sales or leases of the clergy and school or orphan school lands made before the passing of this Act, shall be applied in the following manner:—1. A sum equal to the whole amount distributed during the year one thousand eight hundred and seventy-nine among the religious denominations of the Church of England, the Roman Catholic Church, the Presbyterian Church of Scotland, and the Wesleyan Methodists shall, continue to be distributed out of such income as aforesaid among such denominations during the said interval, and shall be paid in the same manner and according to the same proportions as in the said last-mentioned year. 2. The whole residue of the income remaining after such distribution shall, during the like interval, be paid annually to the Colonial Treasurer to be applied by him in the manner and for the purposes expressed by the section next following."

Mr. DARLEY regretted that the Legislature had not seen fit to extend the time up to which these payments should be made, to five years, as he had proposed when the bill was before the Council on the previous occasion. When the small amount of money which the Government would receive from these lands was taken into consideration, he could scarcely understand the action of the Government. He warned the Government that it was quite possible that the home authorities might see fit to disallow the bill altogether, simply on the ground that sufficient provision was not made to compensate those who, beyond all question, had, if not a legal interest, certainly a moral claim, to consideration.

Mr. C. CAMPBELL quite concurred with Mr. Darley, and thought that even to extend the payments of the Churches for five years instead of two and a-half years would be a poor equivalent for the large amount of trust property which was about to be made public property. He objected to this clause, inasmuch as it would be the means of establishing a bad precedent by confiscating in this manner lands which had never been granted to any individual or body of persons.

Mr. FOSTER objected to the bill in its present form, as far as the term of two years and a half was concerned. This principle could be justified by no precedent; and it was unreasonable to suppose that an allowance of the income derived from these lands for an extended period of two years and a half, could be a reasonable settlement of the rights of the denominations interested.

Mr. OGILVIE was of opinion that the attempt to reduce the period from five years to two years and a half was a gross injustice. He regretted that Mr. Darley had not moved an amendment in this particular portion of the clause, which would make the bill a more just and equitable one.

The clause was then affirmed on the following division:—

The bill was then passed through its remaining stages without amendment, and, the report having been adopted, the third reading was made an order of the day for Wednesday.

CROWN LANDS PURCHASES VALIDATION BILL.

Sir JOHN ROBERTSON moved the second reading of the above-mentioned bill, and briefly explained the leading features of the measure.

Mr. ALEXANDER CAMPBELL said he did not intend to give a vote in the direction of opposing the bill, but one that would afford an opportunity of considering it more calmly and fully than could be done by proceeding with it to-night. He thought he could show good reasons for referring this bill to a select committee of the House. He did not deny that legislation on the matters proposed in this bill was not required, but he submitted that such legislation was not urgent. In fact, the bill itself showed that there was no necessity for dealing with such cases in a hurried manner; for the irregularities which the bill proposes to condone have existed for many years; and the one to which he would more particularly refer presently, existed for nearly seven years. He merely mentioned this to show that the delay which a reference to a select committee would involve could not prejudicially affect the interests of those who would derive advantages under this bill. This was a bill promoted by the Government in order to give relief to persons who had violated the law. This was clearly the object and scope of the measure before the House, and he (Mr. Campbell) thought that it was incumbent upon the Government to show that the parties who were to be relieved from the consequences of their own wrongful acts were entitled to relief upon just and reasonable grounds. But evidence on this point could not be given in a committee of the whole House and could not be accepted on the mere statements contained in the schedules of the bill. He (Mr. Campbell) thought he could prove this by a simple statement connected with one of the cases contained in schedule A. He would not mention names because that might prejudice the case in the subsequent investigation before the select committee. The selection he referred to was made on a reserve seven years after the reserve was proclaimed. However, as he understood that the hon. member in charge of the bill would not oppose the amendment he was about to move. He (Mr. Campbell) would move it without any further remarks, as follows,—"That the bill be referred to a select committee for consideration and report, and that such committee consist of the following members, viz.:—Sir John Robertson, Mr. Docker, Mr. Piddington, Mr. Campbell, Mr. Fraser, Mr. Marks, Mr. Foster, Mr. Busby, Mr. Flood, and the mover; that the committee have power to call for persons and papers; and that the petition which had been presented against that bill should be referred to the said committee."

Mr. DOCKER supported the amendment. He said that in 1876, when he was in office, he submitted to the House a bill similar in purport to this bill, but on that occasion Mr. Samuel strongly protested against this class of legislation, and the result of the opposition then shown was that the bill was referred to a select committee, which brought up a report bearing the signature of Mr. Samuel himself. The bill was eventually dropped in consequence of the prorogation of Parliament. He hoped that the arguments used by Mr. Samuel on that occasion would be allowed to have due weight now.

Mr. DARLEY hoped that the committee would pay some attention to the report of the former select committee, of which Mr. Samuel was the chairman. Some of these cases needed very close examination, and he mentioned, in particular, that of a man named Daniel Cleary, who had selected 40 acres in the town common of Hargrave.

Sir ALFRED STEPHEN suggested that the bill should be read a second time, and then referred to a select committee.

Sir JOHN ROBERTSON said that he had no objection to the fullest investigation of these cases, and for that purpose he would consent to the second reading of the bill being postponed. He understood that the Land Minister was fully prepared to supply the fullest information in regard to every case. No matter how his hon. friends Mr. Docker and Mr. Samuel might have changed their positions with regard to this bill, he (Sir John Robertson) could claim that he had stanchly adhered to his opinion that where, by the action of the Government, or the officers of the Government, people had been induced to settle upon land, those people should either have that land given them or have compensation.

The motion to refer the bill to a select committee was then agreed to.

WHARFAGE AND TONNAGE RATES BILL.

Mr. SAMUEL moved the second reading of the above-mentioned bill.

The motion was agreed to without discussion, and the House having gone into committee, clauses 1 and 2 were agreed to.

In reference to clause 3,

Sir ALFRED STEPHEN drew attention to the proviso of the clause, namely:—"Provided that all goods arriving from any of the Australian colonies or New Zealand, or any of the Pacific islands, landed at any public wharf and entered at the Custom House for transhipment shall be exempt from any wharfage rates chargeable under this Act." If these charges were to be regarded as a duty—a question upon which he would offer no opinion—it would appear to be a differential duty, and as such, in direct contravention of an Act of Parliament.

Mr. SAMUEL promised that the matter should receive consideration.

The remaining clauses of the bill were agreed to with verbal amendments, and a new clause was added, giving power to let the jetty at Circular Quay, notwithstanding. The provisions of 43 Vic. No. 13, and schedules 2 and 3 of the bill were also negatived, and the bill was then reported to the House, and the report agreed to.

MUNICIPAL CATTLE SALE YARDS SITE ACQUISITION BILL.

This bill, having passed through committee, was recommitted on the motion of Sir ALFRED STEPHEN, for the purpose of reconsidering certain clauses.

Clause 6 was amended as follows:—"The issue to be tried in such action shall be, whether the claimant is entitled to a larger sum by way of compensation than the amount of the valuation so made by the Mayor, and notified to the claimant as aforesaid; and, if so, to what sum. And if, upon the trial of the said action, the verdict shall be for a greater sum than the amount of the said valuation, the costs of the action shall be borne by the Council; but if the verdict shall be for a sum equal to or less than such valuation, then the cost shall be borne by the claimant."

Clause 8 was verbally amended and passed.

Clause 9. "The several sections of the Act twenty-second Victoria, number nineteen, hereinafter specified, together with the respective powers, authorities, duties, liabilities, obligations, and other the provisions therein contained, are hereby declared to be incorporated with and embodied in this Act to the intent that the same may be applied as fully and effectually to any lands taken under the authority of this Act, as if the said sections were herein specifically enacted, provided always that all conveyances, releases, or other instruments taken by the Council from persons claiming interests in any lands taken hereunder under the sections hereby incorporated referring to land under mortgage or other incumbrance shall be deemed to be by way of acquittance or discharge only; and that wheresoever in any section so incorporated the word 'Commissioner' occurs there shall for the purposes of this Act be substituted in lieu of such word the expression 'Municipal Council of the City of Sydney.'"

Mr. NORTON proposed the omission of the following words in the proviso of the clause:—"All conveyances, releases, or other instruments taken by the Council from persons claiming interest in any lands taken hereunder under the sections hereby incorporated referring to land under mortgage or other encumbrance, shall be deemed to be by way of acquittance or discharge only. And that"—

The amendment was agreed to, and the clause as amended stood part of the bill.

The House having resumed, the bill was reported with amendments, and the report was adopted.

The House at 9.20 p.m. adjourned until the usual hour on Wednesday.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

TUESDAY, JUNE 22.

The SPEAKER took the chair at half-past 4 o'clock.

REPLIES TO QUESTIONS.

Sir HENRY PARKES informed Mr. Cameron for Mr. S. C. Brown that the new post and telegraph offices, Newtown, would be ready for occupation in five or six weeks.

Mr. LACKEY gave Mr. Dangar information respecting certain improvements to post and telegraph offices at Gunnedah, Narrabri, Bingera, and Moree; and court-houses at Mogil Mogil, Bingera, and Moree.

Mr. HOSKINS informed Mr. Barbour that he would lay upon the table a return, giving particulars respecting the lands sold by auction on June 16.

Mr. LACKEY gave Mr. Melville a quantity of information in respect to a number of appointments in the Department of Works.

Sir HENRY PARKES informed Mr. Taylor that there were only seven prisoners in all the gaols of the colony who had served more than fourteen years.

Sir HENRY PARKES, in reply to Mr. Melville, said he did not think there were any Chinese criminals coming to Australia. He had communicated with the Government of Hongkong, and knew, as a fact, that there were no criminals being deported from that colony.

Mr. LACKEY informed Mr. Dangar that a trial survey had been made from Narrabri to the Queensland Border, but no estimate had been prepared of the cost. The country, for a considerable distance, was flooded between the places named.

PETITIONS.

Petitions were presented as follows:—By Mr. MELVILLE, from inhabitants of Wallsend, in opposition to the proposed export tax on coal.

PAPERS LAID ON THE TABLE.

Ministers laid the following papers on the table:—

Returns showing the sales at auction on June 16; Correspondence between Mr. Deputy-Surveyor Christie and other officers and the Minister for Lands; Correspondence respecting a road through Hon. C. Chisholm's land; Correspondence respecting deodorization of offensive matter; Report of Select Committee on Equity branch of Supreme Court, with minutes of evidence.

BRIDGE OVER THE MURRUMBIDGEE.

could act upon, and which, in respect of the law, were not ultra vires. They were the same as some departmental regulations. [Mr. BAKER: And something more—a mining regulation.] He disapproved of departmental practice as a rule, because it meant placing a discretionary power in the hands of the Minister and his officers which ought to be enforced by an Act of Parliament or regulations. He did not think a regulation was required in respect of rights-of-way, because the law provided for them. He wished to point out that one clause was important. Some persons held areas merely for speculative purposes, and directly valid objections were lodged against them the areas were forfeited; but, although this was the case, notice was given to the holders that the areas were to be forfeited, and thus they were placed in a more advantageous position than those who made the objections. These, he considered, should have the first opportunity for obtaining the land, for then the holders of it would be compelled to work it. His hon. friend spoke of rushes at 12 o'clock at night to take up land, but that was not the fault of the mining law, but of a decision of the Supreme Court in some particular case. The hon. member wished to simplify this procedure in respect to cases. He wished for more speedy justice, and the Minister for Mines should take the matter up. The present law would suffice for the use of the colony for a long time yet, and what they wanted was to prevent the imposition of black mail. (Hear, hear.) He knew plenty of cases where persons had taken up land for the purpose of working it, and so soon as any technical defect or quibble in the title could be discovered complaints against them had been lodged. His hon. friend only put matters as suggestions, and very good ones, and there could be no difficulty in his hon. friend adopting them. He thought a wiser thing could not be than that any one proving a case against another should be considered as first applicant for the lease in dispute. He should vote for the resolutions, believing that they were only suggestions to the hon. the Minister for Mines, who could use his own discretion in adopting so much of them as he thought necessary.

Mr. COPELAND, in reply, thought that hon. members would see that these were merely suggestions to the Minister. If any hon. member would point out any part of the Act which would prevent any part of his resolutions being put into effect he would withdraw them at once. [Attention was called to the state of the House, and a quorum formed.] There was full power for the Governor to make regulations in reference to leases, and for the Mining Board to make regulations for miners' rights. These resolutions were framed to obviate a number of difficulties in the way of applying for leases, so that a man who held an old shanty on a quarter of an acre of ground by miner's right might not be able to extort money for giving his consent to allow mining under it. He defied anyone to show law for the department authorizing the warden to inquire into complaints, and even then there was no machinery to bring complaints before the warden. He should press his resolutions.

The motion was negatived by 27 votes to 8 on the following division:—

CLAIM OF MR. RUDDER.

Mr. R. B. SMITH moved,—"1. That a Select Committee be appointed, with power to send for persons and papers, to inquire into and report upon the petition of Mr. E. W. Rudder, for his services in connection with the gold discovery, 1851; and that the progress report, brought up on 24th July, 1879, be referred to such committee. 2. That such committee consist of Mr. Baker, Mr. Copeland, Mr. J. Davies, Mr. Hurley (Hartley), Mr. Cohen, Mr. M'Elhone, Mr. Webb, Mr. Burns, Mr. Day, and the mover. He explained that on the 15th July, 1878, a Select Committee was appointed to inquire into the petition of Mr. Rudder. The committee entered upon its labours, and took a mass of evidence, after which, in consequence of the approach of the end of the session, they brought up a progress report, in which they recommended that the inquiry should be resumed next session. That was why he now asked the House to appoint this committee. The whole of the evidence was taken, and there remained very little for the committee to do but to draw up the report.

The motion was agreed to.

PUNCTUATION OF ACTS OF PARLIAMENT.

Mr. FARNELL moved,—"That, in the opinion of this House, all bills and all Acts of Parliament printed for the Government of this colony should be duly punctuated, in accordance with the modern practice of the Imperial Parliament." He moved this resolution principally because an hon. member of the Upper House (Mr. Stewart) had carried a similar resolution in that Chamber, and he understood that it could not be carried into effect unless it was agreed to by that Assembly. He did not seen anyobjection to Acts of Parliament being punctuated, and it would be a very great assistance to persons, especially magistrates, who knew very little about punctuation or grammar. It would not affect the law itself, as the Judges would put their own interpretation upon the law. He believed Acts of Parliament were punctuated in all the other colonies, and the judgments of the superior Courts were punctuated. The resolution was carried unanimously in the other Chamber, and nearly every member spoke in favour of it.

Sir HENRY PARKES said it did not matter very much whether the resolution were carried or not, as they knew that as a rule the punctuation in Acts of Parliament was entirely disregarded by Courts of law. This was one of the arguments which was urged against the resolution when submitted to the Assembly two or three years ago; and other arguments were to the effect that the absence of punctuation compelled the authors of laws to put their meaning in clearer language than they would do if they depended upon punctuation, and that a wrong punctuation would mislead persons not accustomed to the interpretation of statutes. The present practice served every purpose, and no complaint had been made, and while punctuation was not used it had a tendency to induce persons to study greater clearness of language than they might otherwise do. It was therefore just as well to let things alone, at all events, until a new Parliament met, when they might have the matter brought under their consideration.

Mr. FITZPATRICK said he could not see why if an obvious good could be done, it should not be done. He thought there was a responsibility thrown upon Parliament to make the meaning of their Acts plain, and this could not be done without punctuation. There was a great injury caused by the present practice, as it required a person versed in the law to interpret their statutes; and if they carried this resolution, the Courts would take cognizance of the punctuation, as it would be at least prima facie evidence of the meaning of the House.

Mr. JACOB would oppose the resolution, on the ground that it would be better to leave things as they were, the difficulty being to decide who was to punctuate the bills that were brought before them.

Mr. GREENWOOD opposed the motion, as the construction of an Act of Parliament depended upon its wording, and not upon the punctuation.

Mr. BUCHANAN said the meaning of an Act should be plain, and good English explained itself without punctuation. If an attempt were made to punctuate Acts of Parliament, great confusion would necessarily arise.

Mr. FARNELL replied to the arguments which had been adduced against the motion.

The question was then put and negatived on a division by 35 votes to 5, the minority consisting of Messrs. Fitzpatrick, Farnell, O'Connor, Copeland, and Beyers.

THE AMENDED DIVORCE BILL.

Mr. BUCHANAN moved,—"1. Seven months having elapsed since the Amended Divorce Bill was reserved and sent home for the Royal Assent, for the third time, and the home authorities up to this date, not having given us the slightest intimation of its fate, or how it has been dealt with, or even acknowledged its receipt, this House is of opinion that such treatment is neither respectful to the Parliament nor to the people of this country. 2. That the above resolution be communicated by address to his Excellency the Governor, for the purpose of being transmitted to the Principal Secretary of State for the Colonies, for presentation to her Majesty the Queen." In putting this motion on the paper he had not the slightest intention of doing anything but upholding the dignity of Parliament. They had sent the bill home for the third time, and it was over seven months since it was received there. The fact of both Houses having sent it should have demanded decent treatment at the hands of the Imperial authorities. When these knew that on two occasions both Houses passed the bill, and that they had rejected, and that it came before them a third time, there were strong reasons why the Parliament should have been respectfully and decently dealt with. But they had been utterly neglected. ("No.") The bill had been at home four or five months, and before the authorities, and they had not had the receipt of it acknowledged, nor any intimation of how it had been dealt with. This was not a matter that affected any individual but the whole country, and if there had been a slight at all it affected the whole people. He would not care how long the home authorities desired to consider the bill if they had been respectful enough to acknowledge the receipt of it. He had no doubt that if the motion were agreed to it would have a beneficial effect. He would leave it to the Assembly to say how far it was judicious or politic, but he would imagine that a Parliament of any spirit would not brook the treatment which this one in this matter had received.

Mr. SPEAKER: Does any hon. member second it?

Mr. FITZPATRICK: I do.

Sir HENRY PARKES said that it was to be regretted that the hon. member had submitted to the Assembly a motion of this kind. It might be objected to on its phraseology alone. He would object to any resolution on a serious subject that talked of "documents being sent home." The word "home" he considered should be omitted, and the word "England" substituted in its place. But he had a more serious objection than this. He objected to their sending such resolutions to the Secretary of State. The Government of the country ought to be able to deal with questions of this magnitude without reference to the Secretary of State. On its merits, however, he did not think the hon. gentleman could possibly adduce any arguments that should receive the support of any hon. member. They were not in a position on such a slight pretence to pass a vote of censure on the Imperial Government, and in language so strong and clear that no Government would submit to. The hon. member ought to be aware that her Majesty the Queen was, by law, allowed two years in which to give her assent to any measure reserved for the signification of her pleasure. It would be a serious thing to pass a resolution which in phraseology was no credit to them, and for which there was no defence, and he did not think the hon. gentleman would find many members willing to do so.

Mr. FITZPATRICK said he seconded the motion pro forma; but he thought also that there were some grounds for the irritation which the hon. member had manifested, and he was at liberty to speak on this subject, because he had voted against the bill. But he would not like for cause to be given for any unpleasant correspondence with the home authorities. He desired simply to point out that when the law was passed giving her Majesty two years to exercise her assent or not in regard to a bill reserved for her pleasure, the time occupied in a voyage to England was much longer than it was at present, and still not unreasonably long; but it was absolutely beyond the requirements of the case to suppose that a Government wanted seven months to consider a document that reached them in one. The Premier had suggested that the Government of the colony should be trusted to deal with such subjects as this; but what if they took no heed of them; was no other course to be availed of? If they had taken any notice of this one, the Assembly no doubt would have been made aware of the Queen's decision by this. As the member for Mudgee had entered his humble protest on the matter, it was to be hoped he would now withdraw the motion.

After some remarks from Mr. GARRETT, who considered that the member for Mudgee had some grounds for complaining, Captain ONSLOW said that he thought the bill would require not only seven months but seven years to consider, for it affected the marriage laws of the Empire. He intended to vote against the motion.

Mr. BUCHANAN replied, and said that if the members of the Home Government were like the hon. gentlemen, it would no doubt take them seven years to consider this matter. He had no desire to press the motion, but thought the Government might have communicated their intentions to the Assembly concerning them. He thought that the sooner the Government communicated this matter to the English Government the better. He asked leave to withdraw his motion, but an hon. member objected.

The question was then put, and was negatived without division.

TOWN HALL MUNICIPAL LOAN BILL.

Sir HENRY PARKES moved the second reading of the Town Hall Municipal Loan Bill.

Mr. BUCHANAN believed that this bill gave the Corporation power to raise £75,000, and thought that this House should think twice before giving that power, since it was for no useful purpose. The ratepayers would be taxed for this, and the Corporation had landed Sydney from one flight to another, each one more absurd than the other. Had this been a bill to prevent the Corporation borrowing, he would have supported it heartily, but as it was he would oppose it.

Dr. RENWICK pointed out that the hon. and learned member himself had made complaint that Sydney had not a sufficiently large hall to hold a meeting in. The citizens had for years laboured under great disadvantage with regard to public halls, for there was not one large enough, capable of containing enough people to determine public opinion, and the acoustic properties of the present halls were bad. The Corporation would supply that want, and, after all, they had come here not to ask for £75,000, but to be allowed to borrow it. He should support the motion.

Dr. BOWKER must complain of the great waste of money by the Corporation in making roads with such deplorable ignorance that, a few weeks after money was expended on them, they were good for nothing at all.

Mr. FITZPATRICK would support the measure, although he concurred in many points with the hon. member who had preceded him. He thought the building of the Town Hall a mistake, but it would be wise to finish it by the completion of the hall, because it might be a source of revenue. The acoustic properties of the vestibule were the very worst he ever heard. He was there a few days ago, and sitting within four seats of the hon. the Premier, yet he could not hear one word he said. When the House bore in mind how fondly he hung upon his words, they would understand what he suffered. (Laughter.) He should support the measure.

Mr. CAMERON must object to these constant complaints against the City Council. The Government were not made liable for the payment of one penny of the money borrowed, and as the citizens through their representatives wished for it, he should vote for the bill.

The motion for the second reading was agreed to, and the House went into committee to consider the bill in detail.

The blank in Clause 1 was filled by the insertion of the words "one hundred," the effect being that debentures will not be issued for less than £100. No amendments were made.

The bill, without amendment, was reported, and the report was adopted.

APPROPRIATION BILL.

The House then went into Committee of Supply.

Mr. WATSON moved,—"That the Committee agree to resolutions of supply from number 9 to number 107 inclusive."

The motion was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN left the chair, obtained leave to sit again, and reported the resolutions to the House.

The resolutions were adopted.

The House then resolved itself into Committee of Ways and Means.

Mr. WATSON moved that there be granted to her Majesty, towards making good the supply for the year 1880, the sum of £4,420,016 5s. 2d.; for the supplementary services of the year 1879 and previous years, the sum of £202,266 17s. 6d.; for the services of the present year, to be raised by debentures secured upon the Consolidated Revenue of the colony, bearing interest not exceeding four per cent. per annum, the sum of £1,263,000.

The resolution was agreed to, reported to the House, and adopted.

Mr. WATSON moved that a bill be brought in, founded upon the above resolution in Ways and Means.

The motion was agreed to.

The Appropriation Bill was then brought in and read the first time. The second reading was made an order of the day for the following day.

LOAN BILL.

Mr. WATSON moved that a bill be brought in founded on the resolution in Ways and Means, to enable the Government to raise a loan to provide for certain public works.

The motion was agreed to.

The Loan Bill was then brought in and read the first time. The second reading was made an order of the day for the following day.

WAYS AND MEANS.—THE FINANCIAL PROPOSALS.

The House having resolved itself into Committee of Ways and Means,

Mr. WATSON moved that there be granted to her Majesty, towards making good the supply for the services of 1878 and previous years, the sum of £4611 4s. 2d.

Mr. FITZPATRICK said the committee would bear in mind that the debate on this very important subject was adjourned on the motion of Mr. Cohen, the Treasurer of the late Government, and it was thought only due to that gentleman that he should reopen the debate from that side of the House; but for some reason with which he was not acquainted, Mr. Cohen was not there, and, therefore, with much hesitation he rose to continue the debate. Of course the House knew that he did not profess to be a financier, but nevertheless the proposals were such that it behoved any member to express his opinion upon them. He could not help commenting in the first instance on the hardihood of the Government, who having indicated publicly in that Chamber a day for prorogation a fortnight off, submitted a scheme of taxation wholly new and wholly unprecedented, and coolly proposed that the scheme should be carried through on the night when it was proposed. If that was the Government the country was prepare to endorse, he quite misunderstood the temper of this country. He was greatly surprised that hon. gentlemen on the other side of the Chamber could be induced to assent to a proposal so startling as this, to come down with a scheme of taxation involving hundreds of thousands of pounds after the day had been named by the Premier for the prorogation of Parliament. There was no excuse for this surprise. The financial scheme was discussed last December, and that financial scheme was hashed up in the most extraordinary manner—to an extent that would have induced ordinary members to resign. But the Government allowed six months to elapse for the incubation of a new scheme of taxation, which was launched after the day of prorogation had been named to the public. He thought the thing was utterly unprecedented, and it would not be to the credit of this colony, or any other colony, to follow such an example. (Hear, hear.) Were the people out of doors nothing in this matter? Were they not to be allowed an opportunity of hearing how they were to be taxed before the taxation was imposed? And the justification for this coup d'etat was wanting. It was a deliberate tax which required means and arrangements to carry it out, which the public should know and must know, and there was no justification for this spirit of Asiatic mystery about it. So much for preliminaries; now as to the character of the taxation. He took in the first place the objection, which he believed to be a well-founded one, that all taxation on exports was a mistake. (Hear, hear.) The highest authorities upon finance were pretty well agreed on that. He was not addicted to quoting very largely, but he intended to quote one of these authorities that night. He had looked into the highest authorities, Stuart Mill, and the present Postmaster-General of England, Henry Fawcett; but he would refer only to one authority, because he thought every man who had thought out the question of taxation must be of opinion that it was a mistake to put duties on exports. He would give only the small summary from the analysis chapter in Mr. Fawcett's work, which was one of the highest authorities on the subject. He said, "It is intended that import and excise duties should be paid by the consumers, but an export duty is supposed to be mainly paid by foreigners. This, however, rarely happens; such a duty usually diminishes the export trade of a country, and thus decreases her national wealth." If he were talking or quoting for the next twenty years he could get nothing more concise than this; and the author was entirely at one with Stuart Mill, that it was fiscally wrong to put a duty on exports. He indeed showed some instances where they were supposed to be advantageous to the public; but only in very exceptional circumstances could they be justified in the long run. He had one word to say in reference to some of the circumstances which had led to the necessity for this increased taxation. The whole justification made by the Treasurer for the duty on wool and on live stock, on large cattle, was the fact—cheered to the echo of course—that the pastoral tenants of the Crown were not paying sufficient rent for their runs. That had been the cry out of doors, the cry of that portion of the Press—only a small portion—that supported the proposals of the Government: that was the cry that he had heard in the House and out of it. To this he would simply say that a man's ability to be taxed was no justification for taxation, and in the next place the imposition of this taxation was not the true remedy for the evil, granting that it existed. (Hear, hear.) The true object of taxation was to pay the expenses of Government, and the duty of Government was to protect life and property, and hence every man owed something to the Government. The fairest means of taxation, therefore, would be a poll-tax, but for the difficulty of collecting it. Governments had accordingly for the most part provided for the payment of a poll-tax by putting duties on consumable articles, articles of the most universal consumption. In this country they were for some time in an exceedingly happy condition in this respect, as the tea and sugar duties represented the tax that would fall upon the poorer classes for the protection of life. For the rest, the only justifiable tax was for the protection of property, and he had no hesitation in saying that in this country property did not bear its fair share of taxation, and never had borne its fair share; and it was with that view that he had supported the Government in passing their Stamps Bill, although a stamp tax was a great drag upon commerce. A portion of the Press had taunted hon. members on that side of the House who objected to this system, with not proposing a better system; but it was no part of the duty of members on that side of the House to propose taxation; but, when any scheme was proposed, to say whether they approved or disapproved of it. (Hear, hear.) It was for the Government of the country to propose their taxation, and if they could carry it, well and good, and if they could not, they should make way for some one else. It was the duty of hon. members honestly and without prejudice to give their opinions on what they believed to be just, but it was no part of his duty or of those with whom he had the pleasure of sitting to propose any scheme of taxation. He would, however, say that the time was not far distant when there would have to be a property tax in this colony; and, above all things, a real property tax. (Hear, hear.) In years past when any man not blind could see how the land was being wasted, when these hundreds of thousands of acres were being sold, there was a drop of consolation felt that when the time came the land was still there to be taxed. But he supposed they expected too much if they expected this Government to look the matter fairly in the face, and put the taxation where it ought to be put. (Hear, hear.) But the proposition was justified by saying that the squatters were not paying enough for their runs. The late Government had sought to increase the terms to enhance the price the squatter was to pay for his runs, and the hon. gentlemen who succeeded them did so simply on account of this proposal. The bank influence was enormous on that occasion; the banks, conceiving that their security on the unfortunate pastoral tenants would be imperilled by their proposal brought their back parlour influence to bear, and they were cast out by the author of the bill of 1861, which they proposed to amend. He agreed that the pastoral tenants were not paying enough for the land, and so long as free selection before survey existed, they never would pay enough for the land. (Hear, hear.) He had given his consent to the bill renewing the free selection clauses with regret, because they had got into the rut so deep that they could not get out of it. The hon. member for St. Leonards, in a spirit of generosity unequalled, threw his Land Bill before the public for six months before he submitted it to a new session, when he was under no moral obligation to do so. They were not paying enough. Then why did not the Government make them pay enough? The Government in pursuance of their half-hearted policy, voted against the Farnell Government which sought to make the minimum rent—God save the mark—1d. an acre; and in their bill to patch up the land laws made it about half that. He was almost ashamed to mention these things, but it was almost humiliating that a Legislature could sit there year after year and allow the real estate of the country to be wrested from them bit by bit, and yet those most interested could not get an acre under £2 a square mile, but a pure-minded Legislature saw nothing but an outrage on the squatters, and the Farnell Government had to give way to others. And now they were to put a duty on exports to remedy an evil which should be remedied in another way. They all knew that the great commodity of the colony was their wool, it always had been, and always would be. They were running an exceedingly keen competition with their neighbours in the South, New Zealand was beginning to compete with them, and wool from the Cape was going home in large quantities; and, although New South Wales had got the Grand Prix for its wool, it might not be so next year, or the year after. Yet this ingenious proposal was made to tax their wool, and thus handicap them in the race. Why could not the Government take the bull by the horns? Why did not they make the squatters pay more? (Hear, hear.) Why could they not say that they admitted the Farnell Government were right in proposing to raise the rents of the squatters, and they would do it when the expenditure of the colony was exceeding its income. He said this first of all. The justification for this taxation existing, the remedy was not a wise one, and it was unfair in its incidences, and the incidences would apply not only to the wool but to the horned cattle. What were the facts? All those duties must be taken into consideration with the circumstances of the colony. They did not consume their wool; they did not manufacture it, and therefore this proposed new taxation would not fall generally on the community, and it would not consequently be justified by the usual formulæ of political economists. Every pound, or nearly every pound, of wool left the colony and could not bring a higher price in the Home market by reason of taxation. And what was the result? The wringing of this taxation from the men who produced the wool. (Hear, hear.) Was it to be justified that because of men being of large means, of much toil, much suffering, having large possessions in sheep, and using Crown lands on insufficient rents, you were to bring your parliamentary blunderbuss to bear upon them, and say "Stand and deliver." He knew one man in these circumstances, and he was not one of the largest squatters in the country, to whom this tax would make a difference of £1600 a year. Such men were disseminating wealth whilst they were accumulating it amongst hundreds and hundreds of people. The whole manufacturing interests of the colony were at stake in their productions, and if they put this duty on pro tanto they handicapped their wool as against the wool of their neighbours, and took the duty out of the pockets of a few individuals, and the wool not being consumed here the consumer would not feel the tax. But this would not apply to the duty on cattle. They knew what disturbing influences there were at work in the neighbouring colony of Victoria when a stupid impost was put on cattle. They shut up one of the largest industries in Melbourne—the meat-curing industry—and they knew that it impeded the traffic of their own colony, so far as sending cattle to the market there was concerned. If they put this tax on cattle they would increase the price of meat to the poorest as well as to the richest people. [Mr. M'ELHONE: No.] He thought he knew what he was talking about. If they put a tax on horned cattle they put a tax on butchers' meat. That was a mathematical axiom. (Hear, hear.) No man in his senses would contradict that. The owners of cattle who were just now in the very depths of despair, the prices of their cattle being almost nominal, thought they would see a bright day in the discovery that would enable the colonies to export frozen meat to England, and this enterprise requiring nursing more than impeding pro tanto —that great interest affecting the whole being of the people here as well as of those of Great Britain, would be checked and embarrassed; and this was no time for any such occurrences. But there remained a more astounding wrong in this proposed taxation—a theoretical wrong—a personal wrong—a Parliament fraud. During the last six or seven years, and since the terrible hunger for land took place, when men were driven on by the banks to take up land and were only partially saved by his late Premier, who diminished the sale of land by raising the price, hundreds of thousands of acres had been purchased by pastoral tenants in fee simple, and the money had been paid down. He thought he was credibly informed when he said that one firm in Riverina had paid the Government £250,000 in hard cash for 250,000 acres. The land was within a ring fence, and being wrought with the most costly and novel appliances of the present day, for the production of wool. Now, what did they say? Because certain men had got lands on lease at cheap rates they were going to tax others who had paid cash down. Was that just? He thought that the member for the Murray, whose experience and knowledge on land matters would not be gainsaid by any member of the Assembly, would bear him out in saying that in the district of Deniliquin there were eight or nine men who had 100,000 acres each. [Mr. BARBOUR: Hear, hear.] The Government proposals made no difference between these men who paid cash down for their land, and those of their neighbours who were using the waste lands of the Crown for insufficient sums. Was this the sort of taxation one would expect in a British community? Were they going to rob men because they were rich? And look at the bearing of this imposition on the smaller portion of their pastoral tenants—he meant their free selectors. Their very life blood depended upon the pastoral occupation of land which this divine land law was going to convert into agricultural holdings. Many paid for fee simple, and those who had not, paid their balances, paid large sums of interest to secure the homes they had selected—and they had obtained what one of the Judges called a Parliamentary title to their land. They had not got pastoral lands for an insufficient rent; and was it fair to them to tax their little bits of wool? They had not the means of large squatters for buying highly classed sheep or steam washing apparatus, but possessed their few hundreds of sheep—400 or 500 perhaps—and paid a much higher sum for their land than the squatter, and the tax would fall as heavily on them as on those who were better off. The wool they produced would not average more than sevenpence a pound. [An hon. member: Sixpence; and Mr. M'ELHONE: Very often fifteenpence in the grease.] At all events, it was of a much lower class, and of less value than that produced by large holders, and yet they were going to charge the same duty on each. If the taxation were of an ad valorem character there might be some justification for it, but as it was it was an additional burden on these poor people who formed a large proportion of the community which they were not in a condition to bear. He had now a few words to say about coal. There was a whole chapter to be found in Mill and Fawcett against the fallacy of England putting an export duty on her coal. The proposal here was to put a royalty on coal. This was not exactly an export duty, but more of the character of an excise duty. He had heard out of doors that there was a justification for this, because the lands were Crown lands, and the minerals were reserved to the Crown. The statement in both respects was untrue. He did not think there was a colliery in the colony of any magnitude which was not held in fee simple by some man or men. The land was brought under the law of 1861, which very properly put a higher price on mineral land than was put on other discriptions, and it was granted away at the higher price, and without any reservation with regard to coals and other minerals. The proposed royalty was worse than an export duty, because of the inquisitorial system that they must adopt to ascertain the quantity and quality of the material raised. They must have their inspectors at mouth, and make the proprietors make affid he amount of the coal. Beyond this general however, to the character of the tax, there on—an ephemeral one perhaps—why it not be put on at the present time. Their s were just issuing from very serious embarrassment— ceived a great shock, which was due to the institution of the vend system, which was immoral and unhealthy unbecoming to the masters, and not favourable to the men—and their coal trade had received a shock it would not easily recover. They had lost the Californian trade and the New Zealand trade almost, and if they had retained the Melbourne trade, it was because the people there could not help themselves. For the last few weeks the Melbourne people were threatened with the peril of being without gas, and was this the time to put a burden on coal? But that was not the worst of it. This royalty not being an export duty, would increase the price of coal to the consumer. So far it was to be deprecated. It was not desirable that the price of coal should be raised upon the poor in the depth of winter. Those who had property would be reached by other means, but the whole scheme of taxation was, he thought, the worst ever proposed from the Treasury benches. [Mr. WEBB: Gold!] There was a peculiar history attaching to this gold. There had been an export duty on gold, and he hoped the hon. member for Northumberland would take notice of what he said. There had been a dangerous increase in the number of Chinese coming to this colony of late, and he said it was the abolition of the gold duty which brought them. (Hear, hear.) It was a duty imposed as a makeshift at the time of the diggers themselves. When gold was first discovered in this colony, they adopted what was then known as the Californian principle, and charged the digger so much per month for leave to dig for gold. When they obtained responsible government the table of the House groaned with petitions from diggers asking for the export duty, which would reach those who were lucky, and let others escape. The diggers next asked to be freed from even that imposition, and they were freed. Why should gold be taken away from the colony for nothing? The gold which was the accumulation of myriads of years would never be restored, while the grass would be renewed by every rain. They could not oppress the squatter and the collier without oppressing the whole colony, and he said the whole trade of the colony would be injured if these export duties were proceeded with. He should vote against every one of them, for they demanded his most earnest opposition.

Sir HENRY PARKES thought that the hon. member had not so much made an assault upon the Government as endeavoured to eulogise the late Administration. On every occasion when it became the duty of the hon. member to criticise the action of the Government, he pointed to the late one. In this instance he would have saved the country by a tax upon the pastoral occupants of the lands of the colony, and at the same time he would have been the friend of the squatters. As to the Land Bill of the late Administration it was defeated on considerations which were indefensible, such as the provision for family selection, which it was thought might be made a cover for great frauds upon the lands of the country. The hon. member told them that this tax of a farthing per lb. upon the wool of the country was to ruin many of the pastoral occupants, and said that they had no right to tax a man because he had been successful in life. He said so too; but where his Government proposed to tax a penny, his hon. friend had proposed to tax fourpence. (Cheers.) He presumed that 1d. per lb. would mean about a penny per sheep; but the hon. member proposed to tax the sheep of the poor selector as well as the large squatter at a uniform rate of fourpence each. (Hear, hear.) The hon. member had made some insinuations which were really not justifiable by facts. He told them that these taxation proposals had been brought in only when it was announced when the House was to prorogue. Up to this time there had been no such announcement. [Mr. FITZPATRICK: There has been an announcement."] The hon. member was incorrect. The other night, when the hon. member for West Maitland was speaking, he was told when the House was expected to prorogue, but that was after these proposals were brought in. (Hear, hear.) Then the hon. member said that they proposed to carry these proposals through on the same night. His colleagues and he had agreed that they would consent to an adjournment, and at once said that they would do so, though they only proposed to adjourn until next day. The hon. member said too that because they were beaten upon their excise duties ordinary men would have resigned. He himself said that had they done so they must have been very ordinary men—(Hear, hear,)—and if no Government supported as they were by such a large majority and upon such important measures, would have resigned upon such a defeat. He would take this opportunity of saying that the very essence of free trade was to impose the same duty upon home articles as on foreign-made ones, and no man was worth anything as a free trader who would not vote for this. They had a perfect right to complain of the men who, with free trade on their lips, voted against what every sound free trader would have supported. The hon. member told them that they were condemned by what the Press said. He was at a loss to say how these proposals had been condemned, and as far as he had noticed the utterances of the Press, they had favoured the imposition of these taxes. The hon. member said that because a man had the ability to pay that was no justification why he should be taxed. Why, the golden rule of taxation laid down by Adam Smith declared that the tax should fall as nearly as possible in proportion to the ability of a person to pay it. (Hear, hear.) Just in proportion to the revenue he derived under the protection of the State should he be required to pay. That was the maxim that every political economist had adopted. The hon. member told them of what would be said when the history of the late Administration came to be written. He himself would not go into so obstruse a question, but would leave it to the hon. member for Yass Plains. He did not think either that he should trouble the House with any further reference to the hon. member's speech. The hon. member had called the proposals of the Government antiquated, obsolete, and the most obnoxious ever proposed; and he told them the other night that they had taken his breath away. If this had been the case, they had had proof that he had recovered it now. (Laughter.) He should proceed to point out that there was nothing very antiquated in these proposals—nothing very obsolete—and that they were not so obnoxious as many other proposals would be. He did not know that he need say anything, as nothing had as yet been said upon the question of free trade and protection. He should dismiss that by simply saying that the present Administration could not go to the Customs for the additional revenue they required. (Hear, hear.) Whatever others might have done, they could not do this. He dared say that the hon. and learned member for Mudgee would have levied ad valorem duties of 25 per cent. upon all imports of goods, or at least of those goods which could be produced in the colony; but this Government would leave that to those who would have to succeed them. That being so, they were left to impose Customs duties on exports, or to submit to a land tax or a property tax. Now, he did not hesitate to say that a land tax in any young country was, in its very character, essence, and nature, unsuitable. Our object was to encourage persons to settle upon the land, on small holdings, to turn the land to the best possible account; and any tax, to be productive, must be to a very large extent fruitful of impediment to productive settlement. It would be rude, illogical, and he thought unjustifiable, in a country with such a large territory of virgin soil, with the greatest desire on the part of the Government to create settlement, to give every legitimate encouragement to a variety of employments and new industries. It would be impolitic to levy a tax upon every holding in this land. Then there was a property tax, which would be so long in being brought into operation that it would scarcely meet the exigencies of the State. But there was this objection: a property tax, if it fell with equality of incidence upon the whole community, would carry with it a machinery which would devour the whole of the profits. It would lead to the creation of an army of tax-gatherers; it would harass the small struggling men at every turn; it would eat up its own profits. The exemptions would have to be so large that it would fall unjustly upon the rich of the country. Then, as they could not levy a property tax so as to reach the lower classes, who should be able to pay, without an expenditure for machinery devouring too large a part of the profits, the Government thought that the better course would be to submit to Parliament these proposals to put a light tax upon the leading exports of the country. But they were told it was antiquated, obsolete, monstrous, and obnoxious. They would see. Nearly the whole of the colonies of Great Britain had export duties on their main products. (Hear, hear.) In India there were export duties on five articles; in Dominica there were export duties on ten articles; in Canada, on five articles; in Montserrat, on eleven articles; in San Christopher, on eight articles; in Sierra Leone, on seven articles; in Trinidad, on twelve articles; and in some other of the West Indian islands on 17 articles. The smile of the hon. member opposite implied "Are these examples for the great colony of New South Wales?" They would see. He would allude to the small colonies first, and he would give some of the principal products on which those Governments raised revenue, to justify the assertion he had made that export duties are levied on their particular products. In Jamaica, as he supposed they all knew, the principal products were sugar and rum. There was an export duty of 4s. 6d. per puncheon on rum, and 6s. 8d. per hogshead on sugar. The other exports were principally hardwoods, and there was an export duty without a single exception of 1s. per ton. In the Mauritius the only export was sugar, on which there was an export duty of 3½d. per cwt. At San Christopher the chief exports were rum and sugar. There was an export duty of 3s. 11½d. per puncheon on rum, and 10s. 5d. per hogshead on sugar. At Sierra Leone the principal article of export was hides, and there was a duty upon them of 2d. each. At Trinidad there was a new product. That island was very fertile in petroleum. There was an export duty on all raw oil of 2s. per 140 gallons, 3s. 8d. on all distilled oil, and 4s. per 140 gallons on all refined oil. On rum they had an export duty of 5s. per 100 gallons, and 7s. 6d. a hogshead on sugar. In West Australia their principal export was sandalwood, and there was an export duty of 5s. per ton on every stick of sandalwood they export. Well, those were Crown colonies; and he would now come to India, where the principal article of export was rice, on which they placed an export duty of 6d. per cwt. But perhaps hon. members would tell him that neither of those Crown colonies, nor India, was any example for us, He would now come to the Dominion of Canada. (Hear, hear.) He supposed that in Canada parliamentary government was more robust than in any part of the British dominions, with the exception of the United Kingdom itself. The only taxes levied there for purposes of revenue were import taxes with a view of protection—(hear, hear)—but they taxed their principal products by an export duty for the purposes of revenue only. To tax those products would in no way protect their manufactures, but they taxed them for revenue. Upon their pine and spruce boards they have an export duty of 4s. 2d. per 1000 feet, and a similar duty upon all descriptions of lumber. Those exports of timber were so large as to yield a very great revenue from this taxation. The mother country, they all knew, had this particular article of wool taxed very heavily until a short time ago. There, no doubt, it was for the purpose of protection, but in all those other cases there was nothing to protect by those export duties; they were levied for revenue only. But let them see what had been the course in the mother country with regard to these duties on wool during the present century. In 1802 the export duty on wool was 5s. 2d. per cwt.; in 1817 it was 6s. 8d.; and in 1819, when Mr. Vansittart was Chancellor of the Exchequer, it was raised as high as 5½s. a cwt., or 6d. per lb.; and it remained at that until Mr. Huskisson reduced it, but it was not until Sir Robert Peel repealed a large number of duties in the direction of free trade in 1844 that the export duty on wool in England was abolished. He had shown at all events, that this proposal of theirs was not without precedent, and, he thought, justification. But the hon. member said that export duties were condemned by all authorities. He would like to know where the hon. member learned that. There was now coming from the Press a new edition of the "Encyclopædia Britannica." He need not tell hon. members that the articles in that great work were written by some of the very best and ablest men that could be procured. (Hear, hear.) This was what the "Encyclopædia Britannica" said upon the nature of an export duty:—"A Customs duty on the export of commodities, on the other hand, has to be paid by the foreign consumers, one of the most agreeable forms of taxation to be conceived. But this desire of taxing foreigners for domestic revenue is met by the competition of general commerce; and nations have to be chary of levying duties on the export of the products of their own industry." He admitted all that: it was to be determined by the consideration whether or not the duty would limit the demand in the market of consumption, whether or not the competitors of other countries could beat us both in quality and price in those markets. But if we could satisfy ourselves that those considerations were in our favour, then he fell back upon what that authority said—that it was one of the most agreeable forms of taxation to be conceived. But the hon. member had quoted John Stuart Mill. Mr. Mill had written an essay apart from his great book, on "The laws of interchange between nations," and he had this essay in his hand. He, too, had discussed the expediency of export duties, and he illustrated a good many by giving examples upon a number of commodities of commerce. He was not inclined to quote all the various views this author took, but he would just read one short passage:—"The question naturally suggests itself whether any country by its own legislative policy can engross to itself a larger share of the benefits of foreign commerce than would fall to it in the natural or spontaneous course of trade? The answer is, it can. By taxing exports, for instance, we may, under certain circumstances, produce a division of the advantage of the trade more favourable to ourselves. In some cases we may draw into our coffers, at the expense of foreigners, not only the whole tax, but more than the tax; in other cases we should gain exactly the tax, in others less than the tax. In this last case a part of the tax is borne by ourselves; possibly the whole, possibly even, as we shall show, more than the whole." Then he showed that if the tax had the effect of diminishing the demand, of throwing out of the market the product on which it was levied, then arose the condition when we should pay, not only the tax, but more than the tax. But that he maintained would not be our case. (Hear, hear.) But he had another authority somewhat favourable to these taxes, an author whose work was considered almost as good an authority as the hon. member for Yass Plains. While this author was also discussing this policy of export duties, he said:—"These considerations, however, will not justify the absolute prohibition of the exportation of wool; but they will fully justify the imposition of a considerable tax upon that exportation." Again, "A tax of five or even of ten shillings upon the exportation of every ton of wool would produce a very considerable revenue to the Sovereign." Once more he said,—"It is scarce possible to devise a tax which could produce any considerable revenue to the Sovereign, and at

The Victoria (s.), left Cooktown at 10 a.m. 12th June, called at all intermediate ports, arriving in Brisbane at 5 p.m. on 18th; left at 5 p.m. on 19th, entered the Heads at 4.41 p.m. on 22nd, and arrived at the Company's Wharf at 5.30 p.m. Experienced strong southerly and south-easterly winds to Brisbane, from thence strong south-west winds to Smoky Cape, from there to Port Stephens thick squally weather and high sea, from there to arrival moderate S.W. winds and fine clear weather the rest of the way.

The Thorne sailed from Liverpool on March 5, with a N.W. wind, which chopped into the S.W. on the 8th, blowing fresh, with heavy squalls. On the 14th some very heavy water was shipped. Again on the 17th a strong gale prevailed, lasting for twenty-four hours. The N.E. trades were taken on March 20, in latitude 27°47 N., and long. 15°43 W. The trades were generally light, and were lost on April 3, in 3° N. On May 22, in latitude 40°10 S., longitude 85° E., a gale commenced from S.W., sea running heavily, filling the decks full; a heavy sea broke the main ventilator and washed away a benecoop from the top of the forward house. The gale abated slightly on the evening of the 23rd, and recommenced on the 24th, backing to the west and W.N.W. on the 25th; the vessel continued to roll heavily. The gales from W. and N.W. continued up to June 5, in latitude 41°10 S., longitude 115° E. Strong breezes prevailed to the 9th, when the westerly gales again freshened, moderating on the 10th; rounded the South Cape of Tasmania on the 14th June. The 15th commenced with a strong gale and rain, decks full of water, up to the 19th, when a heavy sea was shipped on the poop, breaking the pin-rail at the mizen rigging, and washing away the grating of the poop. Arrived in harbour on June 22.

The R.M.S. Bowen (s.) left Singapore 21st June, with mails for Australia, via Torres Straits.

The Governor Blackall (s.), for Sydney, passed, bound south, at 9.15 a.m.

MONETARY AND COMMERCIAL.

TUESDAY EVENING.

The Stock and Share market was very dull again to-day. Bank shares quiet, at about yesterday's quotations: Commercial, fully paid, were dealt in at 99, and offered at 100, new issue wanted at 74, none for sale; City had buyers at 11⅞, sellers at 11¾; Joint Stock, buyers at 15¼, sellers at 15½; Mercantile inquired for at 5¾, held for 5¼; holders of New South Wales would have accepted 51s offers of 2s. 6d. less declined: New Zealand firmly held for 20½; Oriental salable at 21, offered at 26; no demand for Union, 62 asked; Queensland National wanted at 7, for sale at 7⅛. Steam shares weak: 17½ was the best offer for Australasian, sellers at 18; Clarence and Richmond unaltered; Hunter River for sale at 7½, had no inquiry; Illawarra wanted at 5, held for 5½; buyers of North Shore Ferry at 14s., sellers at 15s. 6d. Insurance shares without improvement: Accident had buyers and sellers at yesterday's quotation: General and Australian Fire still out of the market; City wanted at 1s. 1d., for sale at 1s. 2d.; for Mercantile 1s. 4d. was declined, 1s. 7d. wanted; no buyers of New South Wales, sellers at 62s.; Pacific not quoted; Sydney Fire sold at 60s. 6d., and offered at 61s.; Sydney Marine had no sellers, and United no quotations. There were no sellers of fully paid Gaslight, 18¾ could have been obtained, new issue not offered below 5¼. Sydney Exchange had sellers at 10, Pyrmont Bridge at 6¾, and Shale Oil at 11s. Buyers of Volunteer land orders at 89, sellers at 92. Coal shares had no transactions: Bulli salable at 11¼, held for 12½; Wallsend inquired for at 13⅞, held for 14½; buyers of Waratah at 7⅞, sellers at 8; Vale of Clwydd for sale at 17s., wanted at 1s. less. Great Cobar Copper very firm, 51s. 6d. refused, 55s. asked. Krohmann's Gold for sale at 5s.; Star of Peace at 4s. 6d.; Band and Albion still fist, 4s the best offer. 5 wanted; Hustler's pups in demand, at 3s. 3d., offered at 5s. No sales of debentures, and no sellers except of those mentioned yesterday.

The Import markets could hardly have been worse than they were to-day, nor complaints of the dulness of trade more general. Breadstuffs remain quiet, and £11 5s. is now an extreme price for even small lots of Adelaide town brands. Wheat has hardly any sale. There is a little more inquiry for woolpacks, and values are hardening. Candles have not advanced any further, as some of the importers of recently-arrived shipments seem anxious to quit. Kerosene oil has fair inquiry, and we notice that the Southern Cross brand has been raised to 1s. 4d. Liquors have a slow sale; second class bulk brandies are much more salable than Hennessy's or Martell's, owing to the difference in price; case of the former commands 35s., Three Star, 45s.; large contents Geneva sold at 13s.; and a line of Walker's case whisky. Sugars are in better demand, and prices firm. There was some inquiry for small lots of medium tea, and holders are asking a slight advance, as it is now almost certain that the Menmuir will bring hardly any but good to fine first crop. Messrs. Lorimer, Rome, and Co. have received a cablegram from Foochoo, stating that congous are 2 taels higher; market likely to fall; quality of first crop tea this season is better than last year. Steamers Killarney and Menmuir are loading, and expected to sail on 3rd of month. Messrs. Russell and Co., of Hongkong, telegram that the market opened on June 14 at one tael above last year, quality considered. Purchases were for England, and principally fine to finest. The country people very firm; crop better than last season's; steamers to leave not sooner than 1st July; first-class credit sterling bills, at 6 months' sight, 3s. 10½d., market firm. More animation visible in the local produce market to-day. Several orders from the country have come in, and have given business a better colour. Trade orders, however, continue very small, the purchases made being only what is requisite for the time being. Lucerne hay on the wharfs has had a further advance, and best qualities are firm at £4 10s. per ton. The quality coming forward is much improved, and at present no hay is to be had for less than £3 10s. A good business is being done in potatoes. Prime Circular Head lots are firmly held for £4, and New Zealand are selling at £3 15s. Southern railway lots range from £3 to £3 15s., according to quality. Onions are steady at late quotations. Bacon is a little stronger, and prime sides will fetch 0½d. per lb. Butter is worth 10d. per lb. for best, and is plentiful. Eggs are selling slowly at from 1s. to 1s. 3d. Cheese is steady. Poultry has a slow sale at recent values. Millet brooms are worth from 8s. to 10s. per dozen; beeswax, from 4d. to 6d. per lb.; lard, about the same price; calfskins, 4d. to 6d. each.

Sales of leather were held to-day by Messrs. Harrison, Jones, and Devlin, and Messrs. Maiden, Hill, and Clark. There was a fair supply, and prices ruled about the same as last week. Sole brought 8½d to 11d.; kip, 13d. to 16½d.; calf, 1s. 8d. to 2s.; tweed, 19d. to 20d.; yearling, 1s. 9d. to 2s.; harness, 11½d. to 13½d.; bridle, 9s. 6d. to 10s. 6d.; bag, 10s. to 12s. 6d.; basils, 6s. 9d. to 12s. 6d.

Messrs. T. and W. Willis have been appointed Sydney agents for the Marine department of the Commercial Union Assurance Company of London.

Messrs. Fraser and Co. will hold a sale of sugars, candles, groceries, &c., to-morrow.

Macdermott, Brothers, and Scarr report the sale of twelve hundred (1200) choice cattle, from Dotswood station, Northern Queensland, at £2 10s. 7d. a head.

Cotopaxi (s.) has sailed for London: 512 bales wool, 8523 ingots tin, 10,263 ingots copper, 336 cakes copper, 10 bales skins, 2779 cases meat, 453 bags pyrites, 47 cases pearlshell, 265 casks tallow, 2 cases wine, 1 bale hair, 17 boxes corn.

meat to consumers in this colony; but when Mr. FITZPATRICK says that it will do so pro tanto, he practically drops the whole case. The addition of sixpence to the price of a fat bullock will not make much difference to the price per pound of beef in the shop of the butcher. Mr. FITZPATRICK objects to the royalty on coal, because it is undesirable to increase the price of that useful article, and because the time is inopportune, inasmuch as the coal interest is only just recovering from a shock. Cheap coal is an excellent thing for the consumer; but most people would say that an addition of sixpence per ton by the action of the Government would not be felt severely at a time when the price had been reduced four shillings a ton by the action of the coalowners. The fact is, that in weighing the advantages and disadvantages of the Government scheme, the peculiar circumstances of time and place ought all to be fairly taken into consideration. It is a mistake, for instance, to condemn an export tax on our wool on the general ground that it would handicap our producers in their competition with producers in other countries. Would they not be handicapped to an equal extent by increasing their rent to an equivalent degree, or by the imposition upon freeholders of a corresponding land tax? The tax will form part of the cost of production just as much as, but no more than, rent or any other expenses. And if in Victoria they pay a high rent and no export duty, whilst here an export duty supplements a low rent, our producers may still compete on equal terms, or even at an advantage. The question will be whether our people paying the tax can or cannot produce wool as cheaply as people in other countries who may have to contend with higher rents, worse seasons, or difficulties of other descriptions.

Pursuant to a motion made by Sir HENRY PARKES yesterday, the House will resolve itself into committee, to-day, to consider the expediency of bringing in a bill to suspend the issue of publicans' licenses within the county of Cumberland during the next twelve months. The course proposed to be taken by the Government, in the introduction of such a bill, might have been accepted at once, as proof that the idea of carrying any comprehensive measure to deal with the licensing question has been abandoned for the present session, and also as indicating a hope that the matter may be taken up and settled before another year has passed. The question, however, was set at rest by Sir HENRY PARKES's announcement, reported elsewhere. So far as the bill, recently read a second time, is concerned, there is little doubt that in shelving it the Government is submitting to the inevitable; and in recasting it a wise policy will be followed. But, failing to pass a comprehensive bill, it is well that the Government should make a strong effort, close as the end of the session may be, to abate some of those evils connected with the licensing system which most urgently call for a remedy and admit of summary treatment. The question is, what sort of measure should, under the circumstances, be introduced? As it appears to us, one chief source of scandal and mischief is to be found in the untrustworthiness of the licensing authority. Judicial proceedings like the hearing and disposal of applications for licenses ought not to be conducted by gatherings of magistrates, one day swaying in one direction and the next in another, as chance or tactical management may determine. A great improvement would be effected by taking the power out of the hands of the benches, and constituting a new and better authority to deal with the matter; and this might be accomplished by a bill of half-a-dozen clauses, which Parliament ought to be able to pass in as many days. It is to be regretted that this course has not been adopted; but the Government may claim to be in a better position to judge as to the chances of passing such a bill off-hand than anybody who is not behind the scenes, and it may be presumed that the proposal to be made to-day is regarded as the only one which there is any hope of getting adopted without delay. If that be the case, it is better to do what can be done than to attempt too much and do nothing at all. The suspension of the issue of licenses within the county of Cumberland for a year would at least put a check upon that excessive and injurious multiplication of drinking shops, which has been one of the most distinctive features of metropolitan progress for some time past; and whilst this might be a small advantage to gain, it would still be an advantage worth the gaining. It is also to be noticed that, inasmuch as the introduction of the bill, which was read a second time the other day, has committed the Government to undertake the general re-settlement of the whole question, there may be an endeavour by parties interested to get as many houses as possible licensed during the interval. It is the general custom of Parliament to deal tenderly with vested interests; and unless such a bill as that which is to be proposed to-day be carried, there will probably be a tendency to get vested interests established before the law is altered. In order to avoid hardship, it might be well to introduce a saving clause to meet the exceptional case of hotels, properly so called; that is to say of houses intended for the general accommodation of visitors and the public, rather than for carrying on a mere drink trade. If it could be proved that any such first-class houses were in course of erection already, and would be completed within the year at a heavy cost, an exception might, on satisfactory cause being shown, be made in their favour. The suspensory provision in the bill before the House is qualified in some such manner. This, however, is not a point upon which much stress need be laid, for as it is proposed to suspend the issue of licenses for one year only, the chances of real hardship would hardly be of serious magnitude.

The English Defence Commission is conducting its proceedings in a deliberate manner, has adjourned its sittings until August, and is not expected to bring up its report until next year. The questions submitted to its consideration are not such as should be answered in a hurry, and a reasonable amount of deliberation is therefore the proper thing; but it is also to be remarked that if deliberation is only to be another word for trifling with the matter and keeping it in suspense, instead of bringing it to a settlement, the time may come when it will have to be settled in hot haste, and under a disadvantage. The success of the Prussians in their war with France was in a great measure due to the fact that the former were prepared, but the latter was not. It is a tradition with England to be unprepared; and it is quite time, in view of the altered conditions of the day, that the tradition were abandoned. There is no need for looking upon this subject from the alarmist's point of view, but it is better to err, if at all, from excess of precaution than to dream in a fool's paradise and awake in a panic. There is one point to which the attention of the Defence Committee, and in the meanwhile of the English Government, ought certainly to be directed, and that is the bearing which the development of Russian strength in the Pacific has upon the arrangements for the defence of the Pacific colonies. At the time of the Crimean war, the Imperial authorities were taken by surprise in discovering the unexpected force which Russia had at command at Petropaulovski. There would be no excuse for failing to profit by that lesson, or for neglecting to keep a watch upon Russian movements, and to provide against their possible consequences. The relations between England and Russia have been affected, no doubt, by the recent general elections and change of Ministry in England, but it would be a mistake to suppose that the Eastern Question is settled. Mr. GLADSTONE has in fact re-opened it, and what may happen before the close is beyond the range of human foresight. In the meanwhile the differences between Russia and China provide the former with an occasion or opportunity—we need not say with a pretext—for strengthening both her naval and military forces in the Pacific. The possibility of a rupture with China lays the ground for a policy which might be found of immense advantage if, instead of being involved in a trifle like that, the Czar should become engaged in hostilities with Great Britain. According to a late telegram, in addition to the Russian vessels of war ordered last month to cruise off the coast of China, orders have been given for the immediate dispatch of several more vessels to the Pacific, and a considerable number of troops have also been ordered to accompany the present detachment. Without disputing the validity of the reasons assigned for this large augmentation of the Russian Pacific forces, it will be a matter of interest to notice what becomes of them. Should the Chinese difficulty blow over, will they return, or will they remain permanently stationed in this part of the world? In almost all discussions upon the defence of the Australian colonies it has been assumed that the local Governments had no need to trouble themselves with preparations to resist a foreign invading expedition. It has been taken for granted as impossible for any foreign Power to collect the ships, the men, and the materials necessary for such an expedition without the fact becoming known to the English Government in time to admit of the dispatch of a fleet that would be able to give a good account of the invaders. It has been taken for granted as sufficient that we should be able to defend ourselves against the sudden attack of any casual adventurer. It is, however, by no means clear that the question should be considered only in this narrow aspect. If Russia should become de facto the strongest military and naval Power in the Pacific, the question would assume a very different shape. It would not matter to us whether the change were brought about by disturbed relations between Russia and the Celestial Emperor, or by a Russian quarrel with the man in the moon. Russia, having the command of the North Pacific, and having the men and the material for an expedition at hand, might suddenly seize steamers enough to provide a transport service, and set the expedition afloat almost immediately after declaring war upon Great Britain. The story of the "Battle of Botany" is a fiction; but it is a fiction founded upon an appreciation of possibilities—possibilities for which the dispute about Kuldja might be a preparation. One thing appears to be clear. Great Britain, in view of the great importance of her Australian colonies and their growing trade, ought to be beyond all question, in reality as well as in name, the dominant Power in the Pacific. Instead of that, she has no military force in these colonies, and her naval strength on the spot exhibits no true indication of her general naval superiority. Whatever we may be bound to do for the defence of our ports and shores, the maintenance of the British naval forces in the Pacific at a standard fairly representing the general position of the British navy, and adapted to the possible requirements of the situation, is a duty that ought to be recognised and performed by the Imperial authorities.

It must be encouraging to Mr. WATSON, who is struggling with the difficulties of finding fresh revenue, to hear that an agitation has commenced amongst the free selectors near Albury for the abolition of interest on deferred payments, and that part of the programme of the new Association is that no member shall be hereafter elected to Parliament who will not advocate this modification of the free selector's bargain. The TREASURER has had to give up the export duty on gold, and now he is struggling to put a duty on coal; and while he is exhausting his ingenuity to persuade the House to agree to an assessment on stock, he is threatened with the loss of his interest on balances. To be forced to surrender with the one hand while he is trying to acquire with the other will not fill his Treasury, and unless he can keep what revenue he has it will not balance his books to get fresh income from new taxes. At the same time no one can be surprised that free selectors want more. The immense concession that was made to them, by remitting one-half of the improvements they had covenanted to make, has naturally whetted their appetite. They have found out that Government is squeezable, and that Parliament is yielding, and it is only in accordance with nature that they should make a poor mouth again, and supplicate fresh benefactions. No member who voted for breaking the conditions of the contract with the free selector can complain that he is asked to break it again. Nor will this be the last request, because when the interest has been surrendered there still remain the balances. As the squatters are now said to be the largest holders of free selections their interests are identical with those of the "poor man," and covertly, though not overtly, they can wish him success. We are only now beginning gradually to see what a danger to our political as well as our financial system our land policy is growing to be.

Rather more than two years ago the Assembly passed a resolution affirming that it was contrary to the spirit of the Constitution, and dangerous alike to the independence of members of the House and Ministers of the Crown, that members of the Legislative Assembly should practise the profession of land agents in the transaction of business with the Lands office and other public departments. The other day, the MINISTER FOR LANDS informed the House that, having full knowledge of this resolution he had never inquired, nor had he felt it in any way his place to inquire, of the different members of Parliament who interviewed or wrote to him on behalf of their constituents or others, upon matters of business in connection with his department, whether they were acting as professional or paid land agents. This answer is a curiosity in its way. Mr. HOSKINS has administered to the House one of the most effective lettings down it has undergone at the hands of any of its members for a long time. He should—taking this as a basis of judgment—be quite competent to furnish us with a striking essay on "snubbing, as one of the fine arts," and if a prize were offered, he would presumably carry it off as facile princeps. "Gentlemen," he says in effect to the House, "you may pass resolutions as often as you like, but they are not binding either upon members or Ministers. You may condemn the presence of land agents in Parliament, but you may be land agents yourselves for anything I know or care; and if you want to have your opinions enforced, you should employ a detective." If it were anybody's business to see that this resolution of the House was not brought into contempt, it would be the Lands Minister's; but the Lands Minister declares in plain terms that it is not his, and therefore it is nobody's, and the resolution is put out of court with derision. Mr. HOSKINS has practically demonstrated the folly of attempting to put a check upon the corrupt tendencies of a bad law by mere expressions of Parliamentary opinion. It is not "the place" of Ministers or members to be more scrupulous than the law makes them; and if the law sanctions a system which in the opinion of the House threatens the independence of members and Ministers, it is not "the place" of the latter to lift a finger in support of an opinion expressed with a view to their protection. It is not perhaps desirable that even Ministers should step out of their place; but with such a land law as ours, and with land agency business mixed up with the workings of party politics, a Lands Minister cannot well complain if it be considered that "the place" he holds is a questionable one. Nor can members who act as intermediaries between him and other people who have business at the Lands Office claim a right of protest if their conduct is watched with special scrutiny.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

THE Legislative Council got through a considerable amount of business last evening, and it was fully anticipated that the Stamp Duties Bill, which was received from the Assembly yesterday, would have been passed through all its stages; but when Mr. Samuel proposed to suspend the Standing Orders for that purpose, Mr. John Campbell objected. The bill will, therefore, come on for the second reading to-day. The Executive Councillors (Functions Substitution) Bill was read a second time, and passed through committee. The Lands for Public Purposes Acquisition Bill was recommitted, and amended by the insertion of a new clause having reference to the manner in which a claim might be prosecuted in a District Court. The Church and School Lands Dedication Bill (No. 2) was read a second time, and passed through committee without amendment. The Crown Lands Purchases Validation Bill was referred to a select committee to report upon. The Wharfage and Tonnage Rates Bill was read a second time, and passed through committee with amendments; and the Municipal Cattle Sale Yards Site Acquisition Bill was recommitted and further amended.

MR. COPELAND, in the Legislative Assembly, yesterday, moved his resolutions respecting the amendment of the gold-mining regulations, but they were negatived by a large majority. The same fate befel Mr. Buchanan's motion censuring the Home authorities for not yet dealing with his Amended Divorce Bill. Sir Henry Parkes moved that the House will to-day go into Committee of the Whole to consider the expediency of bringing in a bill to suspend for twelve months the issue of publicans' licenses in the county of Cumberland. After this, the necessary resolutions in Supply and Ways and Means having been agreed to, the Appropriation Bill and the Loan Bill were each brought in and read the first time. The debate on the Treasurer's financial scheme was then resumed by Mr. Fitzpatrick, followed by Sir Henry Parkes. The discussion was then adjourned on the motion of Mr. Greenwood.

THE following arrangements have been made by the Speaker, we understand, for the election of a member to represent the electorate of Illawarra in the Legislative Assembly, in the room of Mr. S. W. Gray, resigned:—Place of nomination, Wollongong; date of writ, June 23; nomination, July 5; polling day, July 7; return of writ, July 17. Returning-officer, Mr. Charles Fred. Smith.

THE P. and O. Company's steamship Assam, with the English mails via Suez to May 21, is due at King George's Sound at 10 o'clock to-night.

A TELEGRAM from Melbourne yesterday states that Mr. G. C. Levey, C.M.G., informed the ceremonial committee of the Exhibition that he had an interview with H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, and received an assurance that unless some weighty affairs of State interposed he would pay his long-promised visit to Australia in October or November.

IN the Supreme Court, yesterday, before their Honors Mr. Justice Hargrave, Sir William Manning, and Mr. Justice Wisdeyer, the equity appeal, Roberts v. Gibbons, was argued. Their Honors, by a majority, decided that the proviso in the latter part of the will of the late William Hutchinson cut down into a life estate the estate tail given to William Matthew Hutchinson Gibbons in an earlier clause by the will.

AT the fortnightly meeting of the Sydney Municipal Council held yesterday, some rather important business was disposed of, and a great deal of time was wasted by aldermen making long speeches upon subjects with regard to which every one had come there with a determination how to vote. A report will be found in another column.

YESTERDAY morning the fifth Synod of the Church of England, in the diocese of Sydney, began its sittings, in the Church Society rooms, Phillip-street, a Communion service having previously been held in St. Andrew's Cathedral. The Bishop of Sydney presided, and delivered an address, in which he dwelt on the education question, the Church and School lands question, the marriage laws of the Church, and other matters of denominational interest. The Dean of Sydney was appointed the Bishop's commissary, and Mr. Thomas Robertson was elected chairman of committees of the Synod. Various reports and accounts of the Church organizations were laid on the table, and committees and officers elected for the next year; the business being chiefly of a formal character.

AMONG the motions to be discussed in the present Synod of the Church of England is the following, of which notice has been given by Mr. Alexander Gordon:—"Recent events having shown that the Church of England in this colony has not that political influence to which from the number and intelligence of its members it is fairly entitled, it is desirable that the laity of the Church should, with the concurrence and support of the clergy, but without involving them in politics, combine for the purpose of securing for the interests and opinions of churchmen that consideration which they ought to receive."

THE first of the Sunday School Centenary Conference meetings was held last night, in the Protestant Hall; Mr. J. H. Goodlet occupied the chair, and was surrounded on the platform by a number of clergymen and other gentlemen. Mr. J. P. Walker read a paper on "Sunday Schools, and their influence upon Society:" and Mr. Dobbie read one entitled "How to secure success." They were both well received, and gave rise to considerable discussion. The attendance was very good. A report of the proceedings appears in another column.

WITH reference to a paragraph in yesterday's issue, stating that the National Anthem was sung in St. Andrew's Cathedral at the afternoon service on Sunday, we are requested to state the service appointed for the Queen's accession was used at the Cathedral in the morning also.

IN view of the probability of Darling Harbour continuing to be the goods terminus at Sydney, Messrs. Mort and Co. have purchased a large block of land in the neighbourhood, on which they are about to erect a very extensive warehouse, for the reception of wool and other produce consigned to them.

A MEETING was held last evening at the Coffee Palace Hotel, for the purpose of organizing an Art Society in this colony, having as its object the advancement of the interests of the artists of New South Wales. A committee of sixteen was appointed to draw up rules and regulations, which will be submitted for adoption at the next general meeting, to be held at the Coffee Palace on the evening of the 6th July.

A VERY successful tea and public meeting, in connection with the Rev. John Alexander Dowie's mission, was held, in the Temperance Hall, Pitt-street, last night, at which the Rev. J. A. Dowie announced that a gentleman had promised for the purchase of land and erection of a church the large sum of £20,000 (a free gift), for the purpose of his mission. The announcement was gladly received, amid great cheering.

DR. HARMAN J. TARRANT has been appointed a member of the City Improvement Board, vice C. J. Roberts, resigned.

A SPLENDID lot of prize poultry was on view at Messrs. Bradley, Newton, and Lamb's rooms yesterday. Amongst those shown, and which will be sold this afternoon, was the dark Brahma cock, winner of the first prize at the late International Show. Houdans, Hamburgs, game as well as prize Aracy geese, are also to be offered.

A LIST of articles in custody of the lost property department of the Southern, Western, and Richmond Railways, Sydney Railway Station, is published in yesterday's Government Gazette. The dates on which the articles were found range from January, 1878, to November, 1879. Owners can obtain the articles on application to the traffic manager, Sydney, on paying costs. If the articles found be not released on or before the 30th June they will be sold by public auction, to defray expenses.

ANOTHER link in the chain of mystery attached to the death of Mr. Farley was supplied yesterday by sub-inspector Larkins and sergeant M'Namarra, who found deceased's watch in Frankell's pawnshop, King-street, Newtown. The watch, which it will be remembered was valued at the sum of sixty guineas, was pledged to the pawnbroker by a woman for a trifling sum, on the 19th instant, and has been identified by the son of the deceased and Mr. T. H. Rainford as that belonging to their relative.

AT 4.20 yesterday afternoon a man (name unknown) was brought by constable Robins, of No. 4 station, who found him lying on the ground in a fit, in Kent-street North. He had a succession of fits on the way to the Infirmary and after his admission. He is about 26 years of age, height about 5 feet 7 inches, black hair and whiskers, shaved chin, black moustache, tweed trousers and vest, blue striped cotton shirt, white overshirt, dark tweed coat, white socks, elastic boots, black hard hat, sailor's thimble in pocket.

YESTERDAY, a small fire occurred in a house at the corner of Sussex and Druitt streets, occupied by a Mrs. Scott. Smoke was noticed issuing from an upstairs window, and the occupants were communicated with, and, on going to the room, it was found that the clothes on a bed, in which two children were lying, were on fire. The children were rescued without difficulty, and before they were hurt, and the flames were then quickly extinguished.

SENIOR-CONSTABLE HUGHES reported at the City Coroner's office yesterday that at about 6 a.m. the dead body of a man named John Lawrence, a gardener, 25 years of age, employed by Mr. William Colliver, of Botany, was found dead on the side of the Botany Road, near the Captain Cook Inn, by a man named George Mills. Deceased left the inn a little after 12 o'clock this morning, with two or three other men, slightly under the influence of liquor. There were no marks of violence on the body, and it was removed to the Circular Quay deadhouse, where it lies awaiting the inquest to take place to-day.

THE Goulburn Herald gives the following particulars of the burglary in that town on Sunday evening, a brief account of which was received by telegraph: One of the most daring and skilful burglaries which ever took place in Goulburn happened on Sunday night, when the residence of Mr. William Hart, in Bradley-street, was broken into and jewellery, &c., to the amount of £7 10s. stolen. Mr. and Mrs. Hart, Mr. Hart's mother, and the servant left home for church about 10 minutes to 7 o'clock, taking the usual precaution of locking all the doors and fastening the windows. Besides this, Mr. Hart left a favourite spaniel in the garden, knowing that this dog would try to prevent the interference of any stranger with the house during his master's absence. Service over, they returned home, when the first thing they saw was the faithful spaniel, which Mr. Hart prized very highly, lying dead. Mr. Hart first thought that the dog must have got out of the garden and during his perambulations come across some poisoned bait; but on examining the fence no means of egress could be found. Mr. Hart and his friends then went inside, and, finding all right as far as they could see, began talking about the death of the dog; but, on retiring for the night, Mr. Hart's mother on entering her room missed a hand-bag, in which she had left her purse and money. She also noticed that the candle had been used, and that the tallow was still soft and warm. She at once told her son of her discovery, and he on searching his room found that all the drawers had been ransacked, grease spilt all over the clothes, and his wife's jewellery and purse containing about 10s. 6d. in silver taken away. He at once hurried to the police-station and gave information. When the police arrived they saw that the thief was no novice in his profession. He had first poisoned the dog, then taken a knife and forced back the catch of one of the windows, thus gaining entrance to the house. The mark of a man's foot was also found on the window-sill.

A TELEGRAM from Allahabad, dated May 13, states that, on the morning of the 11th, Colonel St. John formally presented the letter to Sirdar Shere Ali Khan conferring on him the sovereignty of Kandahar. The ceremony took place in the Wali's house, the city palace in the citadel being occupied by us as an arsenal. The chief moolahs, merchants, and other influential townspeople were present, and a large concourse of tribal chiefs and mullicks. A guard of honour of the 66th Regiment was drawn up with band and colours in the courtyard. After presenting the letter, Colonel St. John, in answer to a question, stated that, though not mentioned in the Viceroy's letter, it was intended that the Wali should have the right of having money coined in his own name. After Colonel St. John had made a brief speech, the Viceroy's presents were brought forward, consisting of a superb sword and belt, diamond-studded watch and chain, a clock, some handsome silver plate, and a variety of silk and velvets. General Primrose buckled the sword round the Wali's waist, on which the guard of honour presented arms, and the artilery fired a salute of 21 guns. The Wali then expressed his profound gratitude to the British Government for its many favours, and concluded by declaring his intention of marking the auspicious day by the abolition of two imposts—the poll-tax on all males not being Duranis, and the arbitrary calling in every two or three months of all copper money at a fourth of its nominal value and re-issuing it next day at the original rate. Both these are specially obnoxious forms of taxation, the former having been first imposed by the late Ameer. Sweetmeats and sherbet were then handed round and the proceedings terminated.

VICTORIA.

MELBOURNE, TUESDAY.

In the Assembly, this evening, some time was taken up by Mr. Dow in a personal explanation, which was nothing but an attack on the Minister of Justice. The Audit Act Amendment Bill, to legalize payments up to the end of August for work done previous to the 30th June, was read a second time and passed through Committee. Mr. Gaunson then resumed his speech on the Reform Bill. About half the Ministry and leading members of the Opposition were absent to-night, addressing meetings, and Mr. Gaunson spoke for two hours and a-half, and completely wearied the House. He said that he was prepared to fight the Ministry at Ararat, but at the same time he protested against the dissolution, and warned the Governor that if he accedes to the request for a dissolution he will have to defend his conduct to the Secretary of State. He spoke of the gross injustice of the Ministry in robbing members of the salary to which they were justly entitled. Messrs. Shiels and Graves were the only other speakers, and the debate was adjourned.

SOUTH AUSTRALIA.

ADELAIDE, TUESDAY.

In the Assembly, to-day, the Treasurer, in reply to Mr. Colton, said that another despatch had been sent to Sydney, urging the re-establishment of the Murray Duties Convention. In this the Government pointed out that they did not want to make any profit, but to facilitate trade, and that the Convention would be a great advantage not only to South Australia but to the Riverine settlers. The third reading of the Electoral Districts Bill was carried by a majority of twenty-one. The Attorney-General moved the second reading of a bill providing for the creation of District Courts with civil, criminal, matrimonial, probate, and insolvency jurisdiction. Five Courts will probably be established in the north, and two in the south-east. The present Judges will do the work at present, and the stipendiary magistrates now acting are to be registrars. On the motion of Mr. Downer, the debate was adjourned for a week. A bill was passed, renewing the Act giving the Government resident at the Northern Territory power to try Supreme Court cases. A bill was also passed to enable the University of Adelaide to confer degrees in science, and on women, in accordance with the consent of Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, to grant a charter containing those provisions. A bill was introduced to amend and consolidate the licensed victuallers laws, and leave was given to introduce a bill to amend the insolvency laws.

A meeting was held to-day to consider the advisability of establishing a working men's club in Adelaide. Mr. Giblin, Premier of Tasmania, was present, and gave an account of the founding and subsequent working of a similar institution at Hobart Town. He suggested that instead of one central club it would be better to have smaller ones in various quarters of the city. A committee was appointed to consider the project.

In the Legislative Council to-night the Chief Secretary moved the second reading of the Married Women's Property Bill, which was carried, and taken through committee.

The Rev. Mr. Jefferis delivered a second lecture to-night, entitled "Australia Christianised." The Town Hall was full, and the Chief Justice presided. The lecturer referred to the physical and social conditions of life in Australia, and the coming strife between capital and labour, and said that the regeneration of Australia would only be attained by Christianity.

The Licensed Victuallers' Bill, introduced in the Assembly to-day, consolidates the whole of the present law and repeals five Acts. It prohibits vignerons selling or delivering wine on Sundays, and publicans license fees are increased from £20 to £30 for town, and £10 to £15 for country, and wine and storekeepers' licenses from £2 to £5. The Bench will consider the licenses of new houses on the filing of plans, which will thus prevent the erection of hotels on the chance of a license, and licenses will not be granted if two-thirds of the ratepayers in the neighbourhood object. The Bench will have power to order further accommodation to be provided in existing houses, and if not the license is to be removed, not only from the publican, but the house. Permits to sell at races and public gatherings will not be granted without the consent of the stewards or committee, and publicans are to keep complaint books. Any persons supplying drink to drunken persons are to be punishable, and power is given to open a side door from 8 till 9 on Sunday evenings as well as from 1 to 3 in the afternoon, as at present. To have adulterated liquor on the premises is declared an offence.

The new Insolvency Bill will provide for the abolition of imprisonment for debt, except when the debtor is endeavouring to escape from the colony. The office of official assignee is to be abolished, and creditors may appoint one or more of their number to take charge of insolvent estates. Provision is made to enable the Court to more carefully supervise the action of trustees under assignments; and offenders are not to be tried by the Commissioner, as at present, but be committed to the Supreme Court. The present method of granting certificates is to be abolished at the end of six months, and the debtor is absolutely released, unless found guilty of any fraudulent conduct, in which case a further limit is fixed, during which he will be without protection. If criminally fraudulent, he will be prosecuted in the Supreme Court.

A fatal boat accident occurred at Murray Mouth yesterday. Professor Cavill, the swimmer, and a policeman, named Alfred Thompson, went out in a boat, which upset. Cavill righted it several times and put Thompson in it, but eventually he lost sight of him, and had to swim for his own life. The body was recovered to-day, and an inquest held, when a verdict was returned that deceased came by his death through accident, and that no blame could be attached to any one.

The nomination of candidates for the Legislative Council took place to-day. The following nominations were made:—John Dunn, William Everard, Alex. Borthwick Murray, and James Gordon Ramsay. The election will take place on July 7. Over one thousand persons nominated Mr. Murray.

TOTAL ECLIPSE OF THE MOON.

A total eclipse of the moon took place last night. The following description of it is by Mr. H. C. Russell, the Government Astronomer:—"This evening proved exceptionally fine for the eclipse: the moon being remarkably brilliant, and the smallest print being easily read by means of the moonlight. At ten minutes to 10 a faint shadow was seen on the north-east side of the moon, and at 10 hours 19 minutes 30 seconds the first contact with the shadow was observed. The shadow was of a steely blue colour, and extended rapidly over the moon. At 10 hours 24 minutes the steely colour on the edge of the moon was gone, and faint signs of red appeared; thence on the shadow seemed to be accompanied by a steely-blue band of red light, gradually increasing on the north-east side of the moon. At 10 hours 53 minutes the shadow seemed to have a dark rim one minute in width, all the rest of it being of a conspicuous orange red, getting towards the point of first contact. All the craters in the shadow are easily seen with the telescope, and now are visible to the naked eye. At 11 hours 36 minutes 30 seconds the eclipse was total by computation, but on the southern side of the moon it appears quite white, as if not eclipsed. This continued throughout the total phase, which terminated at thirteen minutes past 12. The night continued exceptionally fine, a few little clouds only appearing at midnight. The most remarkable feature is the inequality of the colour on the moon's surface, as just described, the southern side remaining white, as if not eclipsed, while the northern four-fifths of the moon were of a full orange red. The lunar seas could be detected with the naked eye throughout the totality; and with the telescope, all the conspicuous features of the moon could be seen with ease. I do not remember a total eclipse in which there was so much light upon the moon. The last contact with the shadow, or the end of the eclipse, took place at 11 hours 30 minutes 12 seconds."

WRECK OF THE WANGANUI.

(By Telegraph.)
(From our own correspondent.)

GRAFTON, Tuesday.

I returned from the heads at 12 o'clock last night, after having obtained the following particulars:—The Wanganui left Sydney on Friday night, and left Newcastle at 6.30 on Saturday afternoon. She arrived off the Clarence at 10 o'clock on Sunday night, and it being a fine night with a clear moon, and the captain seeing the beacons plainly, it was considered safe to enter. The steamer passed the reef buoy at a quarter to 11, when the ebb tide, which was making out strong, caught the steamer on the starboard bow, and before she could recover herself she went broadside on to the reef, where she remained about an hour. In the meantime the crew got the boats clear and ready for lowering, but the captain waited for half an hour, thinking his vessel would harden, and that at slack water he would be able to land the passengers and crew better than on a strong ebb tide. About 11 o'clock Mr. Pegus, Custom-house officer, came off and advised Captain Bayldon to land every one as soon as possible, as the steamer might tumble suddenly into deep water. At this time the engine-room was nearly full of water. The passengers, 13 in number, including Mr. Pittman, of the Mines' Department, and the stewardess, who was asleep when the steamer struck, were then sent ashore in Mr. Pegus's boat and the ship's starboard boat. Mr. Pegus returned to the steamer, and just then she commenced to slew head up west, and, the tide catching her port bow, she slided suddenly off the reef, when the cry was raised that she was going down head foremost. At this juncture every one remaining on board, including the captain, who exhibited much coolness throughout, got into Mr. Pegus's boat, and the steamer, drifting fast with the tide, struck the reef buoy; smashing the boat, containing 10 persons and what few ship's effects had been got together. Mr. Pegus, the captain, Mr. Woods, the chief officer, and four others saved their lives by jumping and catching hold of the steamer's rails. Two of the crew and Mr. Freeburn, of the Customs' crew, were precipitated into the sea. The two former have not yet been found, and no doubt they are drowned. Young Freeburn was discovered on the beach, much exhausted. He had been three hours in the water, and the night was bitterly cold. He is now in a precarious state. As soon as he got on the steamer the captain let go the starboard anchor, but shortly afterwards the cable parted and the ship commenced drifting towards the north beach. The lifeboat was then got out, and every one on board got into it, as they believed nothing could prevent the steamer going into the north rock breakers. The boat left, and was pulled to leeward of the breakwater, and while going ashore the steamer was found to have cleared the rocks. The ship's starboard boat returning from the shore was hailed by the captain, who, with Mr. Woods and four of the crew, returned to the steamer and found the pilot on board. The captain immediately set sail and headed the Wanganui south, after which he inspected her below and found the engine-room full of water. There was no water in the cabin, but the floor of the forecabin was slightly submerged. It was found that the after sluice valve was closed, and the fore one partially so. The latter was at once screwed tight, and the crew then started the forward bilge pump. The captain requested the pilot to proceed ashore to procure the assistance of the Government tug Cyclops, to tow the Wanganui in, but just before the pilot could start Mr. Pittman and three of the crew came out in a spare pilot boat, in the hope of picking up the missing men. They went on board, and from this out the bilge pump was kept going. All on board longed for daylight and steam tug assistance. At the break of day the Cyclops came out and picked up the Wanganui about two miles at sea, and had towed her in about a mile when she suddenly went down, head first, in eight fathoms of water. Nothing can be seen but her topmasts. The stern, when foundering, went clean into the air, showing fully 20 feet of keel. The captain was the last man to leave, and, with Mr. Pittman and some of the crew, did so only a few minutes before the foundering. The Wanganui carried a large general cargo, but nothing except a case of gin, some casks of beer, and a few packages were saved up to 5 o'clock on Monday afternoon. Search parties went out looking for the bodies of the drowned men, who were named respectively Henry Norton and Thomas Anderson, but nothing has been seen of them. It was fully six hours after the Wanganui struck before she foundered, so that if assistance to tow her in could have been obtained earlier she could have been beached inside the harbour. The captain remains here until Saturday, but the crew leave by the Australian to-day. Mr. Pegus is deserving of the highest praise for the prompt assistance he rendered; in fact, but for his going out more lives would have been lost. When the steamer struck the captain had just time to blow the steam-whistle before the fires were put out. Some of the crew behaved badly in the boats that were out searching for the missing men. The captain managed to save the ship's register and articles, but lost nearly all his effects.

FOOTBALL.

Rugby v. St. Leonards.—A match was played on Saturday last between the abovenamed clubs, on the ground of the latter, Stanmore. The St. Leonards captain having won the toss, elected to defend the southern goal, and the oval was soon put in motion by the Rugby, who, playing well together, forced their opponents down behind their own goal twice in succession. Scrimmage after scrimmage then took place, during which the ball was kept in close proximity to the St. Leonards goal. Shortly before half-time, W. Guille, by a splendid run, secured a touch-down for the Rugby. The try was entrusted to C. Tye, who succeeded in kicking a good goal. On resuming play after half-time Tucker by a good run obtained a touch-down for the St. Leonards, but the kick being a difficult one failed to score. "No side" was shortly afterwards called, when the Rugby were declared victors by a goal to a try. The game throughout was a very fast one, the St. Leonards being forced to touch down behind their own goal five times, whilst the Rugby took refuge behind theirs thrice. The Rugby passing is deserving of special mention on this occasion. The most prominent players were:—Rugby: Guille, Shaw, Hamilton, Jones, Morris, Tye (captain), and Nelson. St. Leonards: Dunsmuir, Phillips, Tucker (captain), Sloman, Robertson, Davis and Chambers.

THE TALBRAGAR RUSH.

The Department of Mines are in receipt of the following report from Mr. Warden Browne, which they have kindly permitted us to copy:— "Gulgong, June 15th, 1880.

"I have the honour to state, for the information of the Minister for Mines, that on the 5th I proceeded to what was then known as the Talbragar Rush, concerning which there was much local excitement, and where, it was stated, that payable gold had been struck, and shares had risen to a high value.

"I found on arriving on the ground that Messrs. Beasley, Derrington, and party had sunk three shafts into a creek flat, locally known as the Appletree Waterhole, about three miles from the homestead of Messrs. Lamb and Roberts, of Berrima, on the Talbragar, and about 25 miles distant from Gulgong. The two last sunk shafts had been bottomed at a depth of 150 feet, and being distant from each other about 160 feet. They were now driving to connect the workings, after which, they stated, they would be prepared to test the character of the washdirt.

"I remained in the vicinity until the morning of the 8th instant, when I saw a number of prospects washed, which had been taken indifferently from the deposit of washdirt, which was stated to be 3 feet in depth. The greater number of dishes washed showed no gold whatever; in some there were small specks, known as colours by the miners. I saw, however, a prospect of about 3 grains, stated to have been washed from a dish a short time before.

"This test was held to be unfavourable; the greater part of these miners and others, who had come from a distance, returning to their homes. The prospectors, however, continued to express hopes of ultimate success, and are still driving to the northward.

"In conclusion, while expressing regret that no tangible evidence of payable gold was given on the occasion of my visit, I am by no means sure that further prospecting work in the vicinity will not be successful.

"T. A. Browne, Warden."

AMUSEMENTS.

THEATRE ROYAL.

A capital house assembled to enjoy the third representation of Byron's famous story of "Our Boys," by the London Comedy Company. Every one has seen the play and knows already the clever talk of Mary Melrose and Charles Middlewick, the exquisite affectation of Talbot, the somewhat petulant jealousy of Violet, the warmhearted kindliness of Miss Clarissa, the severely aristocratic propriety of Sir Geoffrey, the unconscious vulgarity of the Butterman, the fidelity of Miss Annie Taylor's delineation of the "slavey" Belinda; and just because all this is known, and the impression of the thorough capability of the players is so rooted in the public mind, we use the word "enjoy" advisedly, as best expressing the universal sentiment which animates those who go to see "Our Boys." And assuredly their wishes are realized; a more complete, agreeable, and satisfying entertainment we cannot well imagine in the way of theatrical performances. The characters fit their representatives excellently if taken separately, but as a whole they are unequalled by any previous cast; and in this as in other plays the scenery and stage appliances distance all other attempts. The company have done much for the colonies, by showing how plays can be put upon the stage even in Australia, and their influence will, we think, permanently mark a new era in the drama. Mr. Marshall is inimitable as Perkin Middlewick; indeed this thorough comedian has the happy faculty of convincing the public that whatever character he assumes is the very one specially designed to display his powers at their best; it is impossible to say wherein he shines most—his exuberant delight in his boy's return; his humiliation at the billiard defeat and "cutting the cloth," only soothed by the prospect of the day when he can "lure him on to skittles;" or his struggles in the third act between the Roman fancier's duty, his love for Charley, and his devotion to his "pal," the once 'mighty Violet. Each member of the company received individually and collectively the warm approbation of the audience, and all were recalled more than once. In another column Mr. W. S. Lyster thanks the public of Sydney for the support awarded to the company during the past season, and assures them of his intention to persevere in providing material in opera and drama worthy of their support; in the meantime Mr. Arthur Garner is the sole manager of the London Comedy Company, and his efforts to submit good bills of fare will undoubtedly meet their reward. "Our Boys" will be repeated to-night, and until further notice. Mr. Rice and his orchestra deserve mention for the good use they make of all available resources.

VICTORIA THEATRE.

The "Irish Detective" shows no falling off in public favour; and improbable as the occurrences are—in spite of the assertion that the events really happened—they are so successfully and cleverly put together, and the persons concerned do their business so well, that it is natural they should meet with hearty support from the lovers of sensational drama. The prominence given to the detective himself to a certain extent nullifies the parts played by others. This will not always be the case, and doubtless during the season of the present company opportunities will be afforded for greater displays of power by some characters than is afforded in this play. Mr. Carey and Miss Ansted own still larger parts than those which fall to their share; and also Mrs. Greville and Miss Mainwaring. Mr. Riggs as usual delighted the audience, and Mr. Greville and Miss Kate Foley, who certainly are "put on" to make fun, do so most effectually. Last night the song and dance were encored; and the pleasantries of this pair of novel-loving lovers, with the eccentricities of "Don't signify," afford an amusing and agreeable diversion from the horrors perpetrated by Richard Stockton and Dr. Muldray. The final scene is exciting, and the frenzy of the Italian so worked out that the arrival of the outsiders is a pleasant relief. The house was good, and the frequent applause showed that the play suited the taste of the patrons.

MERRY MOMENTS.

Mr. R. J. Roberts and Miss Clara Lemore, late of the London Comedy Company, gave their popular entertainment, "Merry Moments," in Burwood last night, before an immensely large audience. The programme consists of a most pleasing variety of humorous sketches, songs, and interludes, and forms an entertainment which not only amuses while it is given, but also occasions laughter and enjoyment whenever recollections of it occur subsequently. Several portions of the performance were undeniably encored, and all exerted the most pleasant influence on the audience. The same programme will be given at Parramatta this evening, and in Sydney at the School of Arts, to-morrow night.

THE EGYPTIAN HALL.

At the Egyptian Hall and Palace of Mystery—a newly-opened place of amusement in George-street, near King-street—a troupe of Hindoos give one of the cleverest performances we have witnessed here. Two of them are jugglers, and jugglers of a calibre such as a European rarely if ever attains, for not only are their tricks apparently inexplicable, but they perform them at a distance of only a yard or so from the mystified spectator, and use nothing more intricate to aid them than a cloth bag or so. What they do, shows how marvellous are the illusions which may be produced by fingers inheriting the supple skill of generations of jugglers, and trained to deceive the keen gaze of a close ring of curious onlookers. One man mixes a red, a white, and a yellow powder in a glass of water, drinks the mixture, and then spits forth the three-pounders separately. He then swallows a piece of thread, after which he deliberately pierces his side, and, picking an end of thread from the incision, draws forth apparently what he had swallowed. As it emerges the lips of the puncture are drawn up with it, and that he really cuts himself is proved by a few drops of blood which issue from the wound. He then shows you two hollow semispheres of polished brass, and by a single dexterous movement slips them under his eyelids, and flashes upon you a pair of hideous eyes, looking in their brazen lustre against the olive of his skin, like those of a great cobra, or of some idol in a Hindoo shrine. He juggles with three cups, and an indefinite number of marbles, a number which increases and diminishes in the most inexplicable manner. A thimble-rigger would hide his head in despair at the sight of it, and the only trick we can remember which in dexterous illusion at all approaches it was that in which Robert Heller used to link together two apparently solid brass rings, passing the rims through each other, at only a foot distance from your face. Of such tricks as fire-eating and producing eggs out of apparently empty bags we need say nothing, for are they not in the repertory of every European magician? The second performer is a patriarchal old gentleman, who takes an implement like a fiddle-bow with two strings to it, rests three solid wooden balls on it, and then whirling round and round in a giddy waltz, and holding the bow perpendicularly, makes the balls run up and down it in defiance of all laws of gravity. Next comes a ventriloquist, who is in his way a wonder. His dialogue is a funny intermingling of Hindostanee and English, and he produces his voice without effort, his imitations of a crying baby and a squealing puppy being perfect. A fourth member of the company is a bauteh-wallah, or dancing girl, whose performance we have not yet witnessed. In addition to the performance of these Hindoos the Egyptian Hall offers "the attractions" of panoramic views of the Zulu war.

Ostend Rabbits.—Some idea of the magnitude of the trade in Ostend rabbits may be gained from some statistics just published. From these we learn that during the past five months no fewer than 22,219 cases of rabbits have been shipped into this country from Ostend. As each case contains on an average six dozen rabbits, this gives a total supply of 1,599,768 rabbits for five months. As, in addition to these, rabbits are sent from Antwerp, Calais, and Flushing—all of which are sold as Ostend—the actual supply for the period must have been more than 2,000,000 rabbits. The supply has been far below the average of the past few years, the wet season of last year having killed large numbers of rabbits.—Times.

LAW REPORT.

SUPREME COURT.—Tuesday, June 22.

Second Term.—Equity Appeals.

In Banco.—(Before their Honors Mr. Justice Hargrave, Sir William Manning, and Mr. Justice Windeyer.)

ROBERTS V. GIBBONS AND OTHERS.

In this suit Robert Hutchinson Roberts was the plaintiff, and William Matthew Hutchinson Gibbons, Mackenzie Bowman, Thomas M'Culloch, George Hill the younger, Andrew Hardie M'Culloch the younger, Septimus Alfred Stephen, and (by amendment) William Matthew Hutchinson Gibbons the younger, by his guardian ad litem, were defendants.

The plaintiff, in March, 1879, filed his bill, whereby it was prayed that it might be declared that the plaintiff and William Matthew Hutchinson Gibbons (the elder), and the defendants other than W. M. H. Gibbons (the younger) were respectively entitled to the hereditaments therein mentioned in the shares therein set forth, and for a partition and sale, and for an account, &c. Answers were duly filed. The suit was heard before the Primary Judge (Sir William Manning, in the absence of Mr. Justice Hargrave) in June, 1879, who decreed and ordered a reference to the Master to inquire, and report who were the parties interested in the hereditaments, and for what estates, &c., all questions for further directions and costs being reserved. The Master, in October 1879, made his report. "That, if under the will of the testator (W. Hutchinson), William Kenny Gibbons, the father of the infant defendant, W. H. M. Gibbons (the younger), and son of W. H. M. Gibbons (the elder), took a freehold estate in tail male in the said hereditaments and premises, the infant defendant was not interested and had no estate therein, and was not a necessary party to the suit; and that the plaintiff and the defendants (other than the infant defendant) were the only proper and necessary parties thereto. But if, however, under the said will William Kenny Gibbons only took a life estate then the freehold estate in remainder in one-fourth of the hereditaments and premises claimed by W. H. M. Gibbons (the elder) were vested in the infant defendant, who would be a necessary party to the suit; that report was confirmed. The suit came on for further consideration before Mr. Justice Hargrave, Primary Judge, in December, 1879. His Honor by his judgment declared in effect that the infant defendant was entitled to the freehold estate in remainder in the hereditaments and premises mentioned, and that he ought to be made a party defendant to the bill, and that the hereditaments and premises should be sold, and the costs of all parties should be paid out of the first proceeds of such sale.

Against that judgment the defendant, W. H. M. Gibbons (the elder), appealed to the full Court on the grounds that his Honor should have declared that W. H. M. Gibbons (the elder) was entitled to one-fourth of the hereditaments and premises for an estate in fee simple, and that the infant defendant was not interested and should not be a party.

Mr. M. H. Stephen, Q.C., and Mr. F. Barton, instructed by Mr. Salter, appeared for the appellant; Mr. Gordon and Mr. Davis, instructed by Mr. Plomley, appeared for the infant.

Mr. Manning, instructed by Messrs. Holdsworth and Evans, appeared for the plaintiff, who was not interested in the appeal, as it only affected the appellant and the infant.

The Court, by a majority (Mr. Justice Windeyer dissenting) dismissed the appeal. The costs of all parties as between solicitor and client to be paid, according to arrangement, out of the first proceeds of the sale of the share of the appellant.

Mr. Justice Hargrave and Sir Willing Manning held that the estate tail given in earlier part of the will to W. H. M. Gibbons (the elder), was by a proviso at the end of the will, cut down to a life estate.

Mr. Justice Windeyer was of opinion that the proviso had no such effect.

INSOLVENCY COURT.—Tuesday.

The application of Stephen Smith, which had been adjourned for the filing of an affidavit, was further adjourned until August 24; the affidavit not having been filed, six weeks' further time being allowed.

In the matter of Napoleon Smith, the hearing of the application was adjourned till August 10, in order to give insolvent an opportunity to explain the report of the official assignee, three weeks being allowed for the filing of the affidavit.

The application of E. W. D. M'Donagh was adjourned, on application of the insolvent, until August 24.

In the matter of Daniel Sheehy, Mr. M'Laughlin appeared on behalf of an opposing creditor, the insolvent being represented by Mr. J. H. Want. The opposition to the certificate was on the ground that there was a want of full disclosure of the estate, fraudulent preference, and an absence of proper books of account. Evidence having been taken in reference to the matter, the further hearing of the application was adjourned till Thursday.

In the matter of Moyes and Donald, of Wickham, near Newcastle, Mr. S. C. Brown for an opposing creditor examined Mr. Trenchard, the manager of the Branch Bank of Australasia at Newcastle, as to the state of insolvents' accounts for the past four years. The further hearing was then adjourned.

The Court then adjourned till next day.

CORONER'S INQUESTS.

The City Coroner held an inquest at his offices, yesterday, touching the death of a man named Abraham Rogers. Isaac Rogers deposed that deceased was his father, a native of England, aged about 60 years, who had left a widow and five children; witness last saw him alive about a fortnight ago. Mary Hallinan saw him stagger and fall in Pitt-street, and throwing up blood; deceased sometimes complained of pains in his chest; on the day when he fell he seemed sober, but he had been drinking. Constable Ainley conveyed the deceased to the Infirmary on Sunday evening; he was dead before he reached that institution. Dr. Brown had made a post mortem examination of the remains, and found the cause of death to be pulmonary hemorrhage, caused by the rupture of a small blood vessel of the left lung. A verdict was returned in accordance with the medical testimony.

At the Observer Tavern, yesterday, the City Coroner held an inquest touching the death of the young man, named Philip John Rickett. W. H. Rickst deposed that the deceased, his brother, was nineteen years of age, and a native of London; he had been in the colony only a few months; on Sunday last deceased, a man named Adam Clarke, and witness, left Double Bay on a boating excursion, in a centreboard boat, about sixteen feet keel, carrying mainsail and jib; Clarke had charge of the boat at the start as they went down the harbour; when off Manly the kellick was dropped, and fishing commenced and continued until about 1 o'clock, when they went on shore and had lunch, returning to the boat at about a quarter-to 2 o'clock; they then made sail, having reefed the mainsail; it was blowing fresh at the time, from the south-west; witness had the rudder; Adam Clarke was sitting next to him, and deceased was about the middle of the boat; they had the reefed mainsail and jib on; witness had the sheet, and when about 200 yards off Manly Point, and on the starboard tack, witness endeavoured to put the boat about, but she would not go in stays, and Mr. Clarke then took the tiller and sheet and changed places; he kept her away a little, and titled the sails again, and once more endeavoured to put her about, but she would not come round; he then wore her so as to get her before the wind to keep her off the rocks; she jibed, and he sang out to "look out," a back sea from the rocks came into her in the starboard gunwale, they were about 100 yards from the rocks, she sailed off for a minute or so, half full of water and then sank, leaving the three men in the water; Clarke passed a paddle to witness who gave it to deceased, and the three struck out for shore; deceased was a good swimmer, but witness only an indifferent one; Clarke reached the rocks first and assisted witness from the water, they then looked about for the deceased and saw him drifting away at a dist

The PRESIDENT then delivered the following address:—My dear Brethren,—Since the last meeting of our Diocesan Synod several matters seriously affecting the interests of religion have occurred, and we find ourselves placed in circumstances which call for the earnest consideration of the members of the Church of England assembled in Synod. The Public Instruction Act has been passed, providing that at the close of 1882 all aid from the public funds to Denominational schools shall cease. Against this measure I have never ceased to protest, and my opinion of its injustice and impolicy remains unchanged, and I fully believe that its injurious effects upon the character of the people will be increasingly manifest as time goes on. The religious instruction given in numerous Church of England schools will cease, by reason of the abolition of the schools in country districts. The Church of Rome will ultimately receive no real injury by the withdrawal of Parliamentary grants; on the contrary, its schools conducted by teachers of religious character, subject to no inspection or Government control, and in which no conscience clause will be allowed, but where every pupil will be required to learn all Roman doctrine taught thereon, will become more intensely sectarian than ever, and will bring a vastly increased influence to bear upon the destinies of the country. In this respect the effect of the Act will be exactly the contrary to that intended by many of its promoters, who, in truth, have been playing into the hands of those whom they desired to injure. This hostility to the Church of Rome, has, no doubt, been one of the causes why the opposition to the Public Instruction Act has failed to produce any sensible effect. The opinions of members of the Church of England are divided on this subject. Some of our most respected clergy have long been in favour of the system now established by law, and have only been withheld from active co-operation by an unwillingness to disturb our internal harmony. With the laity this is more extensively true, and in some cases the change of opinion has been of the most decided character. Jealousy of the Church of England has at times appeared to be actuating certain of the friends of this measure; and if to those causes there be added a want of appreciation of the value of religious education, and a desire to get rid of the expense and responsibility of maintaining Denominational schools, it is hardly to be wondered at that the opposition has been unavailing and its present defeat decisive. Our duty is twofold. First, to maintain our own schools as far as practicable. I hope that no Church of England School will be given up so long as it can be supported, and that the clergy and trustees will not be in haste to dispose of their property. In some cases the schools may be maintained as private adventures, and may be used to impart a higher class education. The Defence Association, which has been formed for the purpose of maintaining our existing schools and for similar objects, will lend its aid by its counsel and advice. Secondly, our duty to the Public schools is to avail ourselves of the opportunity afforded to us for giving religious instruction in them. By a return which I have procured from the clergy it will be seen that this is already done in very many cases, and, as increased facilities are afforded by the recent Act, I trust that we shall in time be able to include all the Public schools in the diocese of Sydney within the operations of the committee appointed at the last Synod. The report of that committee will be laid before the Synod. The amount of religious instruction which it is possible to give in the Public schools is a very inadequate substitute for the religious education imparted in a well-conducted Church of England school, but we ought gladly to avail ourselves of whatever advantages we possess. The State, which has decided against a tages we possess. The State, which has decided against a Denominational system of education, and adopted one which is secular, does nevertheless afford the time and means of imparting religious instruction. The hour, the room, the children, are there, and the testimony of the clergy so far is that the authorities, including the teachers, welcome the religious instruction, and in some instances have recognized its beneficial influence on the pupils. I hope that the laity who have supported the Government in carrying their educational measures will assist us by contributing towards the expense of imparting religious instruction in the Public schools, and that all the clergy will give their time and influence towards the same object, both personally and by employing suitable agency. If the privilege we at present possess is to be maintained we must prove its utility, and our own sense of its value, by the advantageous use we make of it. I have for many years urged the clergy to give religious instruction in the Public schools, and I again press the subject upon their attention, as one of greater importance than ever. It is one of the principal means by which the entire secularization of the Public school system will be averted, and in the country districts will be the most favourable opportunity for the clergy to become acquainted with the young members of their flocks. It has been a matter of surprise that not only has there been on the part of some persons a want of sympathy with the Church of England in our endeavours to impart religious instruction in the Public schools, but an extreme sensitiveness, approaching to jealousy, lest the children of other denominations should be permitted to be present at it. Our mission no doubt is to our own children, but if others, whose pastors do not attend the Public schools, should desire to read the Scriptures, and even to learn the Creed, the Lord's Prayer, and the Ten Commandments, it seems to me to be a pitiful thing to endeavour to prevent them. I am thankful that the Council of Education placed no unnecessary obstacle in our way, and I trust that the same policy will be pursued under the new administration. So long as the decision is left with the parents of the children we may be content. It is urged that the Sunday-schools will supply the religious instruction which is required. The Sunday-school does not include all the Public school children, and Sunday-school teachers are often young and inexperienced persons. But, without instituting a comparison between the Sunday-school instruction and that given by the pastor in the Public school, we may surely say it is well to employ both methods, and this the Church of England is doing. The committee on Sunday-schools have sought returns, which will be placed before the Synod. They have been obtained for the purpose of drawing up a general scheme of management for the Sunday-schools in the diocese, and with the hope of improving the character of the instruction given in them. To this end some practical measures have been taken. Model lessons and addresses have been given in different centres in Sydney, and it is my wish that with the sanction of the Synod an association should be formed in connection with the Church of England Sunday School Institute at home. The publications of that society are admirably adapted to assist teachers and superintendents of Sunday schools. I beg also to call attention to the fact that the days chosen by the Archbishop of Canterbury and many of the English Bishops for the commemoration of Robert Raikes, of Gloucester, the founder of Sunday schools in England, occur in the coming week, and it has been arranged that services shall be held in the Cathedral on Friday, July 2nd, for teachers in Sunday schools, and on Sunday, July 4, for the elder children of Sunday schools. A meeting of the teachers and clergy will also be held on Monday, July 5. I have received regular reports of the religious instruction given in our Church of England schools from the diocesan inspector, Rev. E. G. Hodgson. The reports are in the majority of instances highly satisfactory, and the third and fourth visits of the inspector have brought to light a growing improvement in the efficiency of the religious instruction. The inspector is able to add that in most cases he has found that suggestions offered on previous visits, with a view to rendering the instruction more systematic and intelligent, have been acted upon. In the prospect of the gradual addition of our Church schools in the country districts, it would scarcely be practicable to continue the services of the diocesan inspector, and as the Church Society have also arranged to appoint an organizing secretary, Mr. Hodgson has intimated his intention of giving up his offices in the diocese, and to leave for a time at least, at the close of this year. I very much regret Mr. Hodgson's departure. He has been in many ways a most useful member of our body. At St. Paul's College, and in the Church at large, in the arrangements for giving religious instruction in the Public schools, and in the organization of Sunday-school instruction, he has been ready to every good work, and his influence has in other respects been of a very valuable character. I shall be thankful if, at a future time, circumstances will admit of Mr. Hodgson's return to us to assist us in our educational arrangements. I have mentioned the appointment of an organizing secretary for the Church Society. This matter was fully discussed at meetings convened for the purpose, and it was finally agreed that such an appointment should be made. The Rev. J. D. Langley was unanimously named as the most proper person to fill the office, and I am thankful to say that he has accepted it. The operations of the Church Society have been so successful, and the work has so rapidly increased, that larger means were imperatively required. The suburban districts between Sydney and Parramatta demand speedy and liberal aid; while the loan fund, which had commenced under very favourable auspices but had not been put forward in the manner that was anticipated, needed some one to give it special attention in order to secure its complete success. At present it does not amount to more than £2500. To visit the whole diocese with help from the clergy, to encourage existing associations and organize others where needed, to bring the claims of the Church Society before every member of the Church of England, and to obtain donations to the Loan Fund will be the principal work of the organizing secretary; and in this I venture to express my hope that he will be cordially assisted by the clergy, upon whose aid the success of the plan mainly depends, and by the liberality of the laity, in whose interest this work is carried on. I have repeatedly urged the society's claims upon the sympathy and aid of all the members of the Church of England, and hope that the assistance which the committee are pursuing by the appointment of an organizing secretary will greatly facilitate the efforts of the clergy to bring about the result so much to be desired that every member of the Church of England may be a member of the Church Society. I maintain that whatever else any member of the Church of England is supporting, he ought to support this society, and that there is no parish in which there will not be found persons willing to contribute if they are invited to do so. It is not a sufficient reason for declining to assist this society that the parish is actively engaged in building its own church or parsonage, and thus "doing," as it said, "the Church Society's work." The parish is enabled to do this by the help of the Church Society, receiving much from it and expecting more, but beyond the annual offertories contributing nothing to the general fund of the society. Some private opinion or personal feeling may give rise to objections, which in these cases it is difficult to remove, but surely every member of the Church ought to feel that he is bound by the common rules of order and consistency to submit to the regulations of the body to which he belongs. The Loan Fund which has been established will be of the utmost service in the formation of new parishes, and will greatly relieve the funds of the Church Society by assisting in the erection of churches and parsonages. I cordially commend it to the support of the members of the Church throughout the diocese. The grants by the Church Society, and the applications which are at present before the committee, show that the Church's operations are actively carried on in every part of the diocese. While the income has increased in all the ordinary sources, and has reached upwards of £14,000, the expenditure is £15,600; and this has arisen from the additional grants made to clergymen and catechists, and is not capable of any diminution without withdrawing from actual work. In two parishes State-aid has been lost; and the Church Society has, in each, supplied £100 a year. Four stipends for curates have been granted, four catechists have been added to the number. Stipends are now granted to thirty-eight clergymen and eight catechists. The Synod will be asked to confirm the formation of three new parishes, to each of which a grant of £100 per annum has been made, and a fourth will soon be formed at Lane Cove, where a clergyman will supersede the catechist, who has hitherto had charge of the district. The number of clergy is now ninety-six, of whom sixty-nine are licensed to cures, 16 are clergy holding a general license, and 11 are curates. This increase in the number of the clergy has been principally from Moore College. Two have come from England, and one from another diocese. We have lost one valuable member of our body by the decease of the Rev. G. C. Bode, whose work at the North Shore had been very successful, and whose abundant labours it is to be feared became one of the proximate causes of his death. The work of the Lay Readers Association has been carried on throughout the year with very great advantage to the Church and to the clergy in whose parishes the valuable aid of the lay readers has been given. A proposal will, I believe, be brought forward, the object of which is to fix in a more definite manner the relation between the Bishop and all persons so employed, and also in the interests of the various congregations to secure as far as possible that the services shall be effective and edifying. At the last Synod I expressed my intention of asking the advice of the standing committee on the subject of the regulations concerning the celebration of marriage. The standing committee appointed a sub-committee of five members, who reported that, owing to a difference of opinion, they had been unable to arrive at any conclusions or to make any recommendations upon the matters submitted to them. The members of the committee who attended were equally divided upon the questions whether the Bishop's license was required by one of his clergy for the celebration of a marriage without publication of banns. Another point was the requirement of an oath before the issuing of a license. On this subject I will now address you, and state the conclusions at which I have arrived. The Bishop's license is a faculty for dispensing with the publication of banns, in order to the celebration of a marriage. The publication of banns on three Sundays in the church or churches of the parish or parishes where the parties resided was intended, amongst other purposes, to prevent clandestine or illegal marriages. The most public notice possible was to be given in the locality were the parties were best known. But, from a very early period in the Church's history, the Bishops have had the power to grant licenses for marrying without banns being first published. Lyndwood, in his "Provinciale," quoted by the eminent Canonist Johnson, says that in a Provincial Synod, held at London, under Simon Mepham, Archbishop of Canterbury, 1328, the granting of such licenses was affirmed. Further, the statute law of England grants this dispensing power to bishops. By the 25 Hen., Sess. 21, the act of submission of the clergy, "All bishops are allowed to dispense as they were wont to do." The 62nd Canon of 1603 forbids any minister from celebrating matrimony between any persons without a faculty or license granted by the Bishop, or persons exercising Episcopal authority, except after the publication of banns; and the 101st Canon prescribes that no faculty or license to marry, without the publication of banns, shall be granted, except by such as have Episcopal authority. It is thus evident that the law of the Church in England before the Reformation, the statute law at the time of the Reformation, and the Canons of the Church of England, as settled in convocation in 1603, either assumed or gave this dispensing power to the Bishop. The Church has ever held that the license to do that which otherwise it was not lawful to do, shall proceed from the Bishop alone. His power to issue such license is unquestionable. It is as much a part of the regulations of the Church as Episcopacy itself, and I do not think a Bishop can divest himself of this dispensing power, though he may see fit, for good and sufficient reasons to suspend the exercise of it, but in this case it appears to me that the law of the Church, and the obligations under which a clergyman has placed himself, would require that resort should be had to the publication of banns. I have observed already that the publication of banns on three Sundays or holydays was to prevent illegal, and, perhaps, inconsiderate marriages. The issuing of a license, while dispensing with the publication of banns, ought not to dispense with those precautions which the publication was intended to provide; the bishop, acting in the spirit and intention of the Church, may properly require that, at the granting of such licenses, security shall be taken by inquiry that there is no impediment or lawful cause to hinder such marriage, and that the consent (if necessary) has been obtained. The surrogate to whom he entrusts the power of granting the license, promises, on his part, that he will fulfil the duties of the office, or in other words, will follow the instructions of the Bishop who has appointed him to the office, to the best of his knowledge, skill, and ability. Now I have reason to believe that these instructions are not in all cases complied with; that in some instances persons are married without a license; that the required oath is not administered; and the conditions of residence and marriage in the parish church where one of the parties resides, are not enforced. The plea is urged that the law of the colony is the rule by which we should be guided in the celebration of marriages; and generally speaking, this may be granted. We obey the laws of the colony as regards the persons entitled to officiate, the oath to be taken, the returns to be made. But it cannot surely be held that we violate the law of the colony by making preliminary inquiries and requiring certain declarations before giving the bishop's license to be married without the publication of banns. The clergyman acting for the bishop does what he is required to do, and what he has promised to do; and then, when he celebrates the marriage, is careful to comply with the law of the State. There is no antagonism between the two acts. The law of the Church is observed, by which society is protected. The law of the colony is obeyed. No one is injured. If any one objects to these preliminary inquiries, he has his remedy—he can be married elsewhere. The State, which gives us authority to perform marriages, places us under no obligation to perform them. The State claims a right to confer the authority, but carefully abstains from enforcing the obligation. This is a most important distinction. If we were under an obligation to perform all the marriages which the State sanctions, we might be placed in direct opposition to it, when one sought a license to be married to a deceased wife's sister, or the criminal parties in a divorce, desired the Church's sanction to their union. The Church at home, no doubt, follows the law of the land because it is an Established Church, and the clergy are, in a sense, officers of the State; but here the law never intended to interfere with the rules of any religious body. We, in respect to the marriage law of the colony, are rather in the position of Nonconformists in England. The liberty which we claim for ourselves is just that which is exercised by Dissenters at home. Objection is also taken to the administration of an oath previous to the issuing of a license, on the ground that it is not only superfluous and unnecessary, but burdensome, if not illegal. The sanction for administering the oath is given by the law under which licenses have been issued. The bishop issuing the license has to be careful that all needful security was taken that there were no impediments to the performance of a marriage. The statements made were to be confirmed by the oath of the party making them. The law of the colony no doubt provides a similar safeguard, and it may be urged that this is all that can now be required. Nevertheless, I do not think that the oath and declaration made at the time of the celebration of the marriage is sufficient. There is no time or opportunity for inquiry or reflection. Young persons have notoriously entered upon this most solemn and momentous act of their lives in a hasty inconsiderate manner, and, aided by a careless, indifferent mode of inquiry, have made false statements and committed perjury, and laid up sorrow for themselves and their friends for the remainder of life. The Church of England endeavours to guard against these dangers by requiring that answers shall be given, not at the moment, and in the excitement of the celebration of the marriage, but at some time previous, when it is possible to enter into details and to ascertain facts necessary for the full understanding of the case. When this is done, the license serves one of the purposes for which it was granted; it is a substitute for the publicity obtained by the publication of banns. Still the objection remains as to the necessity of confirming these statements by an oath. After careful consideration of the subject, I have arrived at the conclusion that it is not desirable to retain the oath before giving the license. The law of this colony prescribes an oath similar to that required by the Church, and without entering into the question of the legality or propriety of administering an oath, it appears to me that as the purpose of the Church is in some measure fulfilled by the State, we may regard the oath taken at the time of the marriage as sufficient. In place of the oath, or even a solemn declaration, I would require the parties asking for a license to sign a form containing the answers which they now give to questions which it is useful or proper always to put to them. It has been truly observed that people will obtain a license on untrue answer when they would not put their hand to a record of the untruth. The substitution of a simple declaration of this kind for an oath does, however, in no way affect the question of issuing the license. I see no reason whatever for a change in the law and custom of the Church so far as to give up the license. It would be an unnecessary disconnecting of the members of the Church of England from the regulations of their Church, and convert the clergy into district registrars, unless we were prepared in all cases to resort to the primitive custom of marriages after the publication of banns. I trust that the clergy will cheerfully accept this conclusion, and that we shall in future avoid the anomaly of the Bishop's deputies refusing or neglecting to carry out the Bishop's directions. Each surrogate is bound, not only to issue licenses before marriage, but to issue them upon the terms and in the manner prescribed by the Bishop. I now turn to another subject. You are aware that a bill has been brought into Parliament for the purpose of alienating the revenues of the Church and School lands from their present application to religion and education, and declaring that they shall be held for the purpose of public instruction. Acting under the advice of the Standing Committee this bill has been opposed, and counsel heard at the bar of both Houses against it. The legal argument of the learned counsel has not been answered, and in the opinion of very high authorities is unanswerable. The Church and School lands are not waste lands of the Crown, they are held in trust by the Crown for a certain purpose, and the trust can only be dealt with by the Imperial Parliament. The Parliament of New South Wales, therefore, exceeds its powers in the proposed legislation. The home Government, in 1862, stated that in any Act passed by the colonial Legislature due respect should be paid to the interest of individuals. Apart from the general question of the Church's right to these revenues, there is no doubt that certain clergymen have a personal interest in them. In two cases stipends which would have been paid from the consolidated revenue, because all the conditions required by the Church Act were complied with, were paid under the authority of a minute of the Executive from the Church and school revenue. For twenty years other parishes have received grants from this fund. It was felt by some members of the Legislative Council that a moral claim to compensation had in these cases been established and a clause was inserted in the bill, continuing the existing scale of payment for five years. I consider this term inadequate, and that it should be ten years at least, but in the sake of obtaining a final and peaceful settlement of the question, and on the assurance that the Government would support the five years' extension, I was willing to give up further opposition to the bill. You are aware of what has since been done. It is proposed that three years shall be the term, and against this act of spoliation we must carry our protest to the Home Government. The principle of compensation having been admitted it will hardly be expected that we shall regard three years' payment as sufficient and satisfactory. At the Synod held last year, I stated in reply to a question that the boundaries of some of the country parishes were on record in the Registry, and that I would endeavour to obtain a complete return of the remainder. I requested each rural dean to furnish me with a report concerning the parishes in his rural deanery; and in a very short time I trust that the boundaries of all the parishes in the diocese will be defined. At the request of the standing committee I have also obtained through the rural deans the information asked for by the Synod, as to the condition of churches, parsonages, and school houses in the diocese. The reports which in some cases are very full, and in all apparently accurate, will be laid upon the table, and may be referred to a sub-committee for examination and further report. They will be useful also as suggesting the best form in which returns of the same kind may hereafter be made. I feel greatly indebted to the rural deans for their ready compliance with the demands made upon their time and labour in obtaining the information contained in the above returns, and for other instances of their readiness to give me the assistance I require. It is a matter of regret that they have not in all cases met with the same willing aid from the parochial clergy, who for some cause or other have neglected to give the desired information. It is perhaps less a matter of surprise, that they as well as the committee for obtaining statistical returns should be disappointed, when I state that a direct communication from the Bishop does not always elicit a reply. I received from several of the clergy a request that I would give my sanction to the introduction of Bickersteth's "Church Hymnal" into the diocese, and after careful inquiry from persons competent to form an opinion I recommended it to the Chapter of the Cathedral, who agreed to its adoption. It will be used in the Cathedral for the first time on the first Sunday in July. I feel assured that it has only to be known in order to win its way rapidly in the diocese. Nearly all the best hymns, together with a large proportion of the best tunes contained in other collections, are found in it. The hymns for the Church's services are most beautiful and appropriate, there are excellent hymns for schools and children, there are no objectionable hymns, and the whole tone of the book stamps it as a Church hymn book of the highest character. On the subject of the introduction of a new collection of hymns for use in the congregation, it may be desirable to observe that, on the authority of Bishop Wilberforce, I have before stated that while a Bishop has not authority to require the discontinuance of a hymn book which may have been long in use in a congregation, on the other hand a clergyman is not at liberty to introduce a new hymn book on his own authority. I do not know what value is to be attached to this rule, but it is reasonable that some restraint should be imposed upon the preferences or the fancies of individual clergymen, or the result might be as many different hymn books as congregations. If any authority is to be exercised it may properly be in the hands of the Bishop. I recommend that wherever any change is made the Church Hymnal should be introduced. The ordinances of the Synod, together with the standing orders, have been reprinted, and may be obtained at the Registry. The trust deed for a church, drawn up by Mr. Gordon when chancellor of the diocese, will be laid before the Synod. I have used it, and it has been adopted in the diocese of Grafton. I should be glad if by a resolution of the Synod it was recommended for use in this diocese. I have spoken so largely upon matters affecting the diocese as to leave little time for referring to subjects of more general interest. But I will not close without saying that I regard with great concern the hostility to religion which is manifested in the infidel lectures given from week to week, and largely attended by young and old. In some instances I know that these lectures are attended by persons who have no stated place of worship to which they can go, and the remedy is in an increase in the number of churches, and of activity on the part of the existing clergy. The discourses of the clergy should be calculated to meet the difficulties which the Scriptures present to thoughtful and inquiring minds. It is not necessary to be always combating unbelief, and the various forms of scepticism, but it should be remembered by the preacher that amongst his hearers there are the doubting, the perplexed, and the sincerely anxious waiting to have their difficulties removed and their doubts resolved. The works of the Christian Evidence Society, published by the Society for Promoting Christian knowledge, are very valuable for the pastor and for the people. If men have read themselves into infidelity they can find in this series every needful help for their extrication from the snare. With reference to the Church of Rome, our attitude as a reformed Church can never really change. Circumstances arising out of political or educational action may for the time appear to bring us nearer to each other, but the real and fundamental differences must ever remain the same. Rome makes no advances even to those who appear to desire "corporate union" with her. The Council of Trent fixed her creed, and modern developments and accretions have made union with her less possible than ever. The Church of England gives no uncertain sound as to the duty of her children. She adopts the language of prophecy, as interpreted by the present learned Bishop of Lincoln, and, regarding Rome as the Babylon of Revelation, "cries mightily, with a strong voice," "Come out of her, my people, that ye be not partakers of her sins, and that ye receive not of her plagues." It is to be regretted that the tone of our Church's testimony should be weakened, not merely by a false liberalism, or by a dangerous sympathy, but by an unreasoning animosity which blinds the understanding to the claims of a common citizenship. The grounds of our opposition to the Church of Rome are set forth in the articles of our Church; and, while these are so distinct as to show that by no possibility can there be union with that Church, which, in common with the Church of Jerusalem, Alexandria, and Antioch, hath erred, not only in living and manner of ceremonies, but also in matters of faith, they are set forth with such gravity, simplicity, and continual reference to the Word of God, as to make them not only a manual of instruction to the inquirers but a medal of temperate and restrained contention for the faith. It would be well indeed for the true interests of the Church if her Articles were more carefully studied by her own ministers and members, as well as by any persons who desire to know what are the real opinions of the Church of England. The doctrines of grace drawn from the source of All Truth would be more fully set forth; that Article whose position in a Church's theology is a sure test of its soundness or decay, justification by faith only, would be as largely expressed as it is in the homily of salvation; the only name whereby Holy Scripture sets out to us that we must be saved, the name of Jesus Christ, would be exalted; "The wicked and such as are destitute of a lively faith" would be warned that "they are in nowise partakers of Christ," and all would be admonished that "the body of Christ is given, taken, and eaten in the Supper only after a heavenly and spiritual manner, and that the means whereby the Body of Christ is received and eaten in the Supper is faith." This teaching of the Church is founded upon the Word of God and the condition and necessities of human nature, and can never become unsuited to the times. It may be set forth with all the varied powers, and illustrated by the most fervid eloquence of modern preachers, and whatever rightly commends it to the attention and reception of the hearer may be fitly pressed into the service; but the simple truths of man's need and God's mercy in Christ, which pierce the conscience and inflame the heart, must pervade that ministry which is to bring man into a state of reconciliation with God. It is teaching of this character which serves to vindicate the claim of the Church of England to be a true branch of the visible Church of Christ, for in it "the pure word of God is preached, and the Sacraments are duly administered according to Christ's ordinance. We may be well satisfied with our position as a Church—we are one with the Church of the New Testament in the profession of our faith—we are apostolic in our order of bishops, priests, and deacons—we are holy as separated from whatever defileth and maketh a lie, and Catholic as holding with the Universal Church, in all ages and in all places the very truth of God. If some deny our orders and others add a fourth order to the ministry, or deny that any order of ministry whatever exists, we revert to the language of the preface to our Ordinal, and say "It is evident unto all men diligently reading the Holy Scriptures and ancient authors that from the Apostles' times there have been these orders of ministers in Christ's Church—bishops, priests, and deacons." This position we maintain, and it is one which can never be subverted. Our only care should be to show by our diligent and holy lives that we do belong to a living fruitful branch of the Church of Christ; to which we adhere because we cordially assent to its Scriptural creed, because we love its simple and impressive services, its warm yet sober devotion, and honour the long list of illustrious and venerable names which grace its annals." As members of the commonwealth we rejoice to be members of a Church which confers the highest benefits upon the people of the land; let it be our aim, in prayerful dependence upon the help of Almighty God, to extend those blessings to every part of the great field of labour in which our lot is cast—let us, my beloved brethren, "be steadfast, immoveable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, knowing that our labour is not in vain in the Lord."

ELECTION OF REPRESENTATIVES.

The PRESIDENT announced the resignation of Mr. Henry Mort as a lay representative for St. Mark's, and that he had received notice of the election of Mr. W. A. Brodribb in his place. The matter was referred to the election committee, who reported as follows:—"The third rule passed on 23rd August, 1867, renders it expedient that upon a resignation of a representative member of Synod, the President shall be duly certified thereof, and that the President shall report the fact of such vacancy to the Synod, or to the Standing Committee if the Synod be not in session, and that the President shall thereupon take the necessary steps to fill up the vacancy. The committee having perused the document sent to his lordship the Bishop, find—1. That the President of the Synod was not duly certified of Mr. Henry Mort's resignation. 2. That Mr. Henry Mort's resignation was premature, it being the opinion of this committee that no member can resign his seat previously to the meeting of the Synod to which he has been certified to have been returned a representative member."

After some discussion, the PRESIDENT said he would issue a precept for the election of a representative for St. Mark's, and no doubt within a day or two the representative could be returned.

FORMATION OF NEW PARISHES.

The Dean of SYDNEY moved separate resolutions to the effect that the assent of the Synod be given to the formation of the new parishes of Enmore, Macdonald Town, and St. Saviour's, Redfern, and explained the boundaries and details of the proposed new parishes.

The resolutions were seconded and passed.

The Rev. CHARLES BARER moved that the definition of the boundaries of the parish of Enmore be referred to a select committee, consisting of the Dean, the Chancellor, Canon Stephen, must be perused as well as possessed. The book has all along got the supreme place in the Sunday school, and the teacher who would be successful in the highest sense can only excel as he follows in the path of those who have been mighty in the Scriptures. Further it is stated that that world-wide power—the Bible Society—was itself originated in connection with Sunday-schools. If we would influence society for good, we must reach the families and individuals of which it is composed. To permanently impress the mind it is necessary to deal with it in the plastic stages of youth. And to influence the young their hearts must be reached. This is the great secret of Sunday school influence. At first of necessity secular instruction had to be given, as the children were frequently ignorant even of letters. But the work of educating the young is now so well overtaken by week-day teachers, that the hours in the Sunday school can be devoted to reaching head and heart with the transforming truths of the Gospel. The touching power, the pathos of the narratives of the Saviour's birth, life, sufferings, death, and resurrection, are not rehearsed in vain by thousands, we might say millions, of prayerful devoted teachers. Hence it has been frequently proved by those who have had to deal with great numbers of Christians seeking for admission to the Lord's table that by far the greatest number of them had become Christians while they were young, and seventy out of every hundred trace their conversion to Sabbath school and Bible class influence. Thus the greater part of our real living Christianity has been born, nursed, and brought to maturity in connection with Sunday schools, so that we may say if Christians are the salt of the earth, the salt obtained its savour through the blessing of God on spiritual instruction imparted during the sacred hours of the Lord's Day. But salt with savour must penetrate. We dwell not upon the fact that our greatest preachers, who have held thousands by the spell of their glowing words, and have been the means of turning many to righteousness, have had the fire of enthusiasm in their high and holy calling kindled while teaching in the Sunday school. It would take too long to show how a master missionary spirit like that of a Cary, a Williams, a Livingstone, a Burns, or a Duff, or the spirits of the equally devoted women, who, in union with such servants of God, were led to yield themselves as living sacrifices through first devoting themselves to the Sunday school. Has it not been in the same circle that the fire of missionary zeal has been kept in latter times burning so brightly? The pence of Sunday scholars have well nigh translated the Bible into every language. The missionary ship Morning Star was built and launched by more numerous small gifts than the vessel had planks, the donations of the girls and boys of America. Here, too, we have the John Williams, the John Wesley, and the Dayspring, launched and supported in the main by the youth in our Sunday schools. When He, who sat over against the treasury, in the day when He shall let nothing that was done in his name go unrewarded, shall manifest who did most for the heathen, the young missionary hosts that gave and prayed in the Sunday school will receive a signal token of His approval. Who can say, then, where this potent influence has not penetrated? What does the British nation, yea, what does the world owe, to Sunday schools? The great hereafter alone will determine how much Sunday school influence has accomplished." (Applause.)

A discussion followed, after which another hymn was sung, and then the chairman called upon Mr. John Dobbie to read a paper entitled "How to ensure success."

Mr. JOHN DOBBIE said: Supposing a Sunday school to be properly organized, all the children rightly classified, the classes large enough but not too large, the teachers wisely appointed, every man in his right place, then there is wanted, first, a plan. Where a teacher has mastered his subject, a very good plan is to read the lesson, shut the book, and get back from the children the points and incidents that had impressed them most. By this means the teacher will learn what parts of the lesson specially interested the class, and these are the parts he should seek to illustrate and impress. Of course every teacher must map out his own plan of teaching—guided by the ages, temperaments, and capacities of his class, and his knowledge of their home life and of the books they read. Further, there is wanted preparation. The pulpit and the press are acknowledged to be the two great powers that influence the world. What would they do without preparation? The Sunday school is also a power, whose influence permeates all society; and if hitherto it has not been fully recognized as one of the great powers, if it has only partially done its work, may we not attribute our want of success to the fact that preparation has been sadly neglected? And never, since Robert Raikes gathered together his first class, has there been such necessity for preparation as now. We have to meet classes whose members have been taught to think, whose minds are inquiring after truth, and who are even ready to argue a point with their teacher, and trip him up should he err in his history or physics, or even logic. Where it can be done, there is, perhaps, no better plan of preparation than for teachers to meet once a week for mutual study. (Applause.) This has what you will, but let it be a preparation class, and so necessary is such an adjunct to every school that no organisation should be considered complete without it. It is a fact that for want of preparation teachers often dread meeting their classes, and the accounts for many a vacant chair on Sunday morning. If we would ensure success we must keep in mind that our boys and girls are in the learning time of life. Probably all of them attend day schools; they are accustomed to school work, and the teaching of the Sunday school must partake of the day school form. The sermon style of conducting a class means that the teacher thinks more of what he likes to do than of what is best for his class. Preparation includes two things, the second of which is seldom thought of. The teacher who aims at success must not only study his lesson until he understands it himself, but he must study how to adapt it to the particular characters who compose his class. Another thing necessary to success is punctuality. It is a painful sight to witness the opening of some Sunday schools. Perhaps not a fourth of the children present; teachers conspicuous by their absence; and the opening services constantly interrupted by late arrivals. Want of punctuality, we all know, would bring ruin upon any business man; and it accounts for a great deal of the non-success of our Sunday schools. No doubt, it can be traced in most cases to self-indulgence, which tempts the teacher to take an extra hour in bed on Sunday morning, and sometimes forty winks after a Sunday dinner. O! these Sunday dinners! But, so sure as "he that loveth pleasure shall not be rich," so sure it is that the self-indulgent teacher will never gather the golden ears in the Master's harvest field—his shall be the stubble, and nothing more. If anything tends to disorganize a Sunday school, and throw everything out of gear, it is the want of punctuality, and until we see our Sunday-schools opened and conducted as punctually as our Public schools are, i.e., every teacher and scholar in his or her place, all materials ready, and every lesson commenced at the sound of the bell, we have no reason to expect success, for punctuality is one of those virtues which admits of no modification. Did my time permit I would refer to the necessity for patience, and the value of prayer—not prayer only, for two other things are necessary, which I shall only name; patience to labour and wait, and prayer, not only over the lesson, not only for the class, but with the class: and if any teacher will take up these five points that I have named, and lay down a plan on the left hand and preparation on the right, and let patience and punctuality stand on either side, like two beautiful pillars, and join the whole above by the wonderful keystone of prayer, then he has an archway by which he will conduct his class into green fields of Divine truth, and into a knowledge of Him whom to know is life eternal, and that is the highest success that can be desired.

A lengthy discussion followed, and various suggestions were offered in addition to those contained in Mr. Dobbie's paper for obtaining greater results.

The meeting terminated with the benediction.

The Company will also build houses and cottages on their estates, and allot them to its members, a small deposit of £5 to £10 by the member, the balance owing to be paid in instalments not exceed ing what would be earned by an ordinary man, with the option of paying additional sums, and thus reducing the proportion of the convenience of the members.

The ELSWICK ESTATE, at Petersham, containing 53 acres, has been purchased by the Company. It will be at once subdivided into allotments to suit all classes. Members may choose their allotments and a plan of building with or without an option, the machine for cottages now in hand approved of by the Board, the Company will erect the building and place him in possession on payment of 10 per cent. of the value of the property. The balance of the purchase money may be spread over a period of twelve years in the shape of rent.

Shares may now be taken up and every information obtained, at the Company's Offices, 171, York-street, Sydney. As only a limited number of Paid-up or Contributing Shares will be issued at present, early application is necessary—large premiums will have to be paid on subsequent issues.

STATION IN NEW SOUTH WALES.
13,000 Sheep
3,500 Cattle
60 Horses.

KING and CUNINGHAM (acting in conjunction with F. L. Barker, of Sydney) have received instructions to OFFER for SALE by PUBLIC AUCTION, at Menzies' Hotel, at half-past 2 o'clock on the above date,
The SHRINDINGABBA STATION, situated in the Albert District, of the colony of New South Wales, containing an area of about
of the most splendid grazing country, together with 13,000 sheep, all of which are finely grown four-year-old wethers, now fat; 3000 head of cattle, nearly all bullocks, ready for market; 60 horses, and all improvements; station plant and stores.
This most desirable property is situated about 110 miles to the north-west of the township of Bourke, and the country may be described as being partly lightly timbered, with the remainder embracing a great extent of the well-known Cuttaburra Plains, so celebrated for the excellent fattening quality of their herbage. It is watered by creeks, dams, never-failing springs and wells, which, having stood the test of the most severe droughts, may be therefore considered inexhaustible.
The improvements are very complete, and consist of cottage, kitchen, store, garden, stable, woolshed, men's huts, paddocks, sheep and stock yards, &c. There are eighty-six miles of fencing erected; and, when the whole run is enclosed, the capabilities are estimated at 60,000 sheep and 5000 cattle.
This station is put into the market for positive sale, necessitated by the winding up of the affairs of an estate; and intending buyers wishing a really first-class piece of country, with room for a large increase, should inspect without delay, and before doing so they can be furnished with any further particulars they may desire by applying to
F. L. BARKER, Sydney;
or King and Cuningham, Melbourne.

FRIDAY, 23rd JULY, 1880.

STATION IN QUEENSLAND,
with 16,000 Sheep,

KING and CUNINGHAM have received instructions to OFFER for SALE by PUBLIC AUCTION, at Menzies' Hotel, Melbourne, at half-past 2 o'clock on the above date,
THE NAMOI DOWNS STATION,
situated in the South Kennedy district of the colony of Queensland, and distant about 170 miles from the port of Bowen, and 60 miles from Charters Towers.
This station contains an area of about
320 Square Miles
of country, part of it being lightly timbered, and the remaining portion consisting of saltbush plains.
With it will be sold
16,000 SHEEP,
of different ages and sexes, 36 head cattle, and 35 horses.
The improvements consist of comfortable cottage, kitchen, huts, store with three rooms attached, woolshed, drafting yards, &c., station plant, and stores.
This property is brought into the market to close a partnership, and would suit many persons wishing to secure a good investment. It is much understocked, and the improvements now on it are sufficient for a much larger development of its carrying capabilities. At present there are paddocks for 15,000 sheep, enclosed with wire fencing, and at the cheap rate at which carriage can be got, the wheels of the country could at a small outlay in comparison to what it would have cost in former years be substantially fenced and subdivided.
For further particulars, apply to KING and CUNINGHAM, Melbourne.

IMPORTANT TESTIMONIAL from the Rev. George Thomas Horn, M.A., Oxford:—

"Dear Sir,—Being troubled with a severe cough during a recent visit to London, I purchased a bottle of your Balsam of Aniseed, and was thankful to find immediate and permanent relief.

"I am, very faithfully yours,
"GEORGE THOMAS HORN, M.A."

"H.M. Gunboat Netley, Wick, Scotland.

"Dear Sir,—Having had a most distressing and severe cough, which caused me many sleepless nights and restless days, I was recommended by his lordship the Earl of Caithness to try your most valuable Balsam of Aniseed, and I can assure you with the first dose I found immediate relief, even without having to suspend my various duties, and the first small bottle completely cured me. Therefore, I have the greatest confidence in fully recommending it to the million.

(Signed) "W. LINDELL, H.M. Gunboat Netley."

NO FAMILY SHOULD BE WITHOUT IT IN THE WINTER.

Francis Murphy, Esq., of Woodstock House, writes to Mr. Connolly, chemist, Alloa:—"I take leave to acquaint you that Powell's Balsam of Aniseed, which I purchased of you, and which you so highly recommended, is an effective cure of coughs. I have used it myself and in my family, and found it a certain remedy, and have known it to relieve inveterate chronic coughs amongst my friends, therefore I can in truth pronounce it an invaluable medicine."

TRULY AN EXTRAORDINARY EXPECTORANT

Mr. Edward M. Ullett, of Burr, Hants, writes to Messrs. Palmer and Son, Ramsay:—"Having been in the habit of using Powell's Balsam of Aniseed for a great number of years, I have pleasure in bearing testimony to its incomparable effects as an expectorant. I always find a single dose gives immediate relief, and a small bottle effects a perfect cure."

INVALUABLE for BRONCHITIS and ASTHMA.—The Rev. Wm. Lush writes from Stixwold Vicarage, Horncastle:—"For the past twelve years I have been in the habit of using myself, giving away, and recommending your Balsam. I should not be exaggerating if I said I have never known it to fail. Whenever I have had a cough I have used it in preference to anything else, and again and again it has cured me."

EXTRAORDINARY COUGH REMEDY.—A Lady writes:—"When you see Mr. Powell tell him that I would not be afraid to face a Russian winter with his Balsam of Aniseed for a companion, although my lungs are most susceptible."

An eminent clergyman in Lincolnshire writes:—"Having found Powell's Balsam of Aniseed a most excellent remedy for coughs, &c., I have been giving away bottle after bottle to the poor of my parish."

LOOSENS the PHLEGM IMMEDIATELY.—The Dean of Westminster's Verger writes:—"I was advised to try the Balsam of Aniseed; I did, and have found very great relief. It is most comforting in allaying irritation and giving strength to the voice."

Lionel Brough, Esq., the eminent actor, writes:—"I think it an invaluable medicine for members of my profession, and have always recommended it to my brother and sister artistes."

The Duc de Montebor writes:—"Chateau de Montabor, Ayetron, France.—From the first dose I felt great relief, the bad symptoms grew feebler, the irritation of the throat was calming down, and I recovered the sleep which had nearly left me."

The effect of one teaspoonful taken in a little water on going to bed is extraordinary.

The Rev. Dr. H. Roberts writes:—"14, Hart-street, Bloomsbury.—I think it only right to inform you that I have recommended to very many families, and have used it most efficaciously in my own, your Balsam of Aniseed; and the extraordinary effect I have received of its worth as a cure for coughs and asthma, under various guises, justify my communication of the fact to you."

MR. MARLANDE CLARKE, Dramatic Reciter, Crystal Palace, Alexandra Palace, Royal Albert Hall, Palais de la Bourse, Brussels, writes as follows:—"I attribute my being able to sustain on many occasions the great strain put upon my voice by continual teaching and reading in public, to a dose of your Balsam of Aniseed."

THE EFFECT of ONE TEASPOONFUL taken in a little water on going to bed is EXTRAORDINARY.

No family should be without it.
